INDEX 1869, Volume I

In Recognition of, and Appreciation for the Value of Their Efforts
On Behalf of the University of Massachusetts Community,
This 1969 MASSACHUSETTS INDEX is Dedicated To:

Oswald Tippo, Provost;

Dario Politella, Professor;

Frank Pesando, Student;

for the integrity and clarity of his vision of what great education should be; for his masterful coordination of high level activity during a period of this University's unparalleled expansion; for his energetic fight to initiate and sustain better programs for the sake of our educational welfare.

for his constructive guidance over the past few years on behalf of campus publications; for being a teacher with whom working is at once comfortable yet stimulating and whose approach to subject matter results in his students' fuller preparedness for life beyond these ivory walls; for sharing with all his people a profound affection for his profession.

for his materially and cognitively unrequited devotion to this yearbook which, for many years to come, will result in the satisfaction of thousands of his fellow students; for being like many other college people with whose association the university experience takes on significantly greater breadth; for the quality of his uniqueness.

So, a century had gone by; and, for the year ahead, September 1968 once again promised us more mud, obstacle courses, and aesthetic abuse. But much more than physical development, September's air had a scintillating resonance of hope, of fear, of plans. September promised to be the start of one very dynamic year.

The job for INDEX people has always been to present a localized history of the year, a special kind of history. The intent has been to create for its special owner a catalyst which, to bridge the ever widening gap of time, works better and better with age. Too often, however, the INDEX—like yearbooks in general—has given a view to its readers as if it were a rose-colored looking glass.

While for most of us, college experience included some "roses," it certainly didn't lack moments of intense concern, belief, and action. But good or bad, university life belonged to us, profoundly affected us. It was us! Thus, for your pleasure and fulfillment, to more effectively recapture this, a coveted time, the 1969 INDEX contains many different, sometimes extremely personal points of view in order to present the spirit of our year of college life poignantly enough to provide a strong reference to interpretations and impressions with which you could really agree and disagree: something unequivocal enough to lighten the darkness born of years passing.

MORNING Brought a Faint Haze, like a Film Before the Eyes, Softening the Lines and Shadows of the Land . . .

And Amid a Line of Pale Buildings Silhouetted Against the Changing Sky . . .

A Generation
Struggled
From its Dazed
State.

The Sun,
Touching the Grass,
Warmed it to a Golden Green, . . .

And there was a Newness about the Earth then, . . .

Which Lasted Only a Few Vital Moments . . .

Before the Brightness of Midday.

The Afternoon
Seemed Longer,
Caught up with Complexities that Grew with the Day Itself, . . .

Lacking Much of the Warmth that was Before, . . .

And of a Mood Which Changed with the Progressing Hours . . .

Into a Sense of Despair—

And the Trials Seemed Perpetual.

But the Day Ended Anyway, . . .

With a Gentle
Darkening of the Sky . . .

And a Soft Hush
Falling over the Cooling Earth.

And the Night Came.

In the Dark Air and Under the Half Light of Streetlamps . . .

Couples
Passed,
Their Voices Sending Tender
Echoes into the Stillness.

And in the Warmth of Some Enclosed Place . . .

Hurried Beat . . . .

And a Hundred Moving
Forms
Shadowed
Under Varied Lights, . . .

Mocking the Calm
of the World Outside.

And in the Flickering Lights Between the Darkness

The Question Came . . .

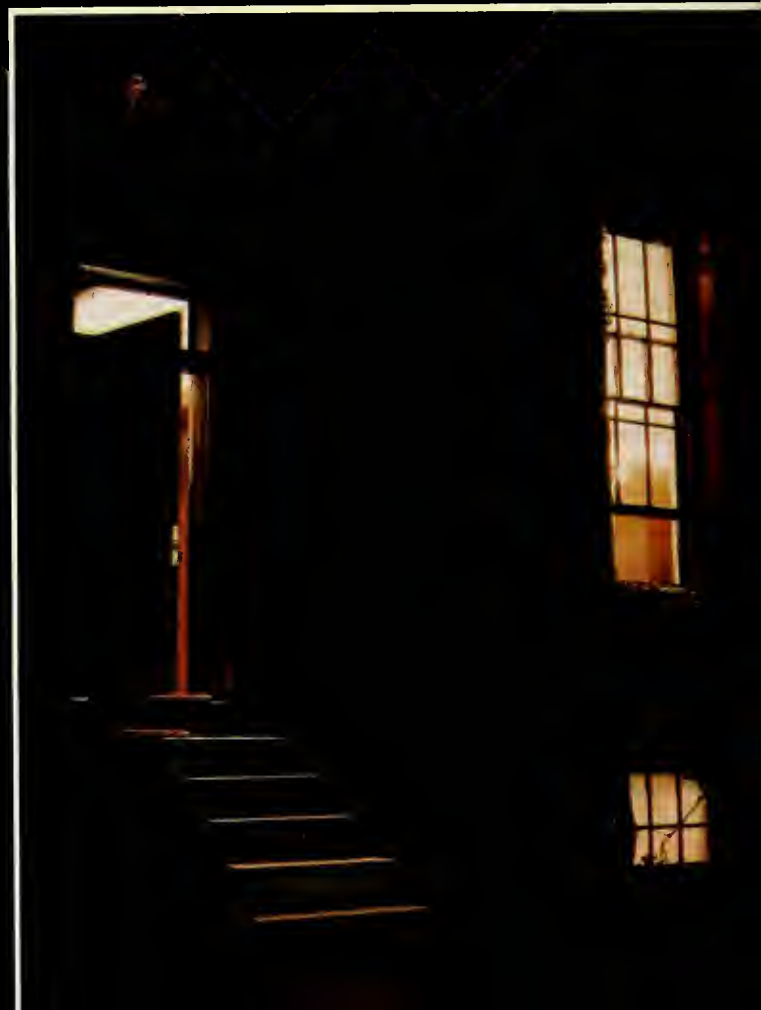

"Where Does the Darkness End?"

And Finally Silence,
When the Old Chapel Bell
Had Sent its Last Quavering Note into the Empty Night, . . .

And no
Voice Remained to Break the Stillness of the Air . . .

And no Foot Pressed its Mark
Into the Water Soaked Earth.

Fraternities, dorms, apartments, sororities! At the time they all seemed so different — but the years, and the change of perspective which they brought, narrowed the gap until the distance was imperceptible. For it was the people, the feelings of the young, that made the life what it was — not the rooms, nor the courses, nor the grounds. They were the days when responsibility and irresponsibility were linked in one, and were the same for all. And the final good-bye came, spoken in a soft whisper.

The Quad: Just as the Old Chapel standing amid the polished walls of the new buildings served as a symbol of what the campus once was, so the Quad, with its isolated ring of houses, remained as a reminder of a time when the college was small, and buildings were separated by areas of grass instead of concrete. They said it was more conservative than the rest of the campus, and this was partly true. For it retained a tradition of dorm spirit and unity, which, in a period of expansion and disruption, was becoming ever more difficult to find.

Orchard Hill: since its origin five years ago, the complex has been the sight of continual experimentation on the part of the University. It was here that the new building designs were first put to practice, here that the faculty fellows program, and the CCEBS became a reality.

In the early days of fall, when the lazy warmth of the sun stretched across the grass; in the bleakness of winter when the light of morning first split through the black air, causing both buildings and trees to stand as shadows against the brilliant blue of the sky; and in the cool nights of spring when couples moved in the darkness amid the apple trees; the buildings remained, a community themselves, high above the rest of campus, and set apart from the dirt and commotion of the construction that worked at its core.

WEBSTER FOLLIES WAS . . . . .

a challenge. A challenge presented by the twenty-three year old mini-skirted house mother of Webster house to her residents. The goal: to present the wildest, most lewd performance on campus. The result: the number-one freak-out of the year.

CENTRAL: older than most of the campus and deep in its history. It stands today as all of the campus once stood, buildings shadowed under trees, separated by sideroads and acres of grass. And if it lacked the convenience of Southwest's rooms, it lacked also the concrete earth. In the day there was grass to lie on, and at night there was shelter in the darkness.

PROJECT 10 . . . in its first year on campus consisted of approximately 260 men and women, housed in two low rise dorms – Moore and Pierpont. A Socio-academic experiment, the Project bases its founding upon the premise that students will derive far more benefits from their education if it is self-fostered and promoted by their won interests. Students initiative and creativity is encouraged, allowing more academic freedom, while concurrently demanding a sincere dedication from the students.

“SO, MOM, THIS IS PROJECT 10 . . .”

When I looked up at the old buildings of the campus and thought back to the time when the college was a small haven in the New England countryside and when, upon turning, I glanced at the piles of trees and earth ripped apart by the machines of the construction, the idea occurred to me that perhaps the change was not worthwhile. It was a foolish thought, not founded on any rational determinations; a sentimental thought, provoked by a mind seeking peace from endless frustration. But the idea had no sooner sprung than the challenge to it came. Change was the University. The people came and changed it, and it in turn changed them. And if ever either one stopped changing, there would be no more University.

A Word From The Greeks . . .

To the editor:

The open attack on Greeks is an unfair generalization of the fraternity system. The flagrant attack on the Greek system hurts houses who have taken action on civic and social issues. We feel that open and candid editorials, with rebuttals possible, would provide more constructive benefit than generalizations that make it impossible to comment upon.

The cartoons unfairly condemned the whole system, which includes all of the parts. We, as one of the parts seek to rectify this injustice. Other houses have: participated in a muscular dystrophy drive on campus, sponsored a debate with Dow Chemical, brought Mayor Ryan of Springfield to campus to speak, participated in the heart fund drive, taken part in the Lions Club charity drive, sponsored the varsity - alumni football game, sponsored Christmas parties for underprivileged children, and have caroled at Christmas time at nursing homes. Our house has: sponsored a drive for Appalachia, sponsored a Halloween party for children of the Meadowbrook School, aided Afro-Am in their Marion Williams concert, taken part in the Belchertown volunteer program, and are currently sponsoring (in the memory of Martin Luther King and Robert Kennedy) with the sanction of the Martin Luther King Council a drive for poor people in America.

Expounding on one point within a system does not necessarily describe that system. We do not judge your newspaper by one cartoon, do not judge all Greeks by the actions of some.

The academic life at the University of Massachusetts was not left untouched by the student unrest that swept the nation with greater strength and magnitude this year than ever before, involving students, professors, and administrators alike with its concerns. Evidence of more student concern about the existence of unnecessary required courses, the selection of subject content for courses, and the areas of study for which courses should be developed was shown. Professors and administrators demonstrated a concern for a better working communication with students, and in many instances included students in the decision making processes that determined the complexion of the academic life.

Registration Days: Lots of Little Cards; Lots of New Resolutions.

The first day of Registration wasn't like it used to be. You were out within 15 minutes, perhaps minus a few courses you counted on taking, perhaps with a course you had already taken. At least you got your grades, and, appropriately, your Religious Preference Card. The second day was like it used to be — only worse. Sometimes it lasted two weeks.

For Most,
The Vacation Ended;
For Some,
A Vacation Started—
at
REGISTRATION TIME.

Back from Summer School, Europe, the Cape, the Life Guard's Chair, or the Rubber Plant, we came, our mental batteries energized for ingesting the enlightenment proffered to us throughout the ensuing 15 weeks.

"IBM" cards, "Add" cards, "Drop" cards, "Cume" cards, "Change of Major" cards, "Religious Preference" cards, "Housing" cards, "Athletic" cards, "INDEX" cards, and even "I.D. Card" cards set the mood for those wonderific goings on and frustrations during those four, hard-to-forget days at Boyden Gym.

For many, whose "bag" wasn't a required foreign language, slide rule, sick people, white rats, or the Army, THEN was the time to change their major fields—and lives. Others faced their declining, numerically defined, academic prominence, the CUME, by stocking up on "gut" courses, such as "History of the Cowboy Movie" and the like. Still others just smirked: they had thwarted the lustful temptations of the Hatch, having studied instead.

Anyway, the quest to become a certified thinker resumed twice again on those chaotic days of Registration.

This is the College of Agriculture. Things were happening here, both within and without. On the horizon were changes, new developments, and even greater involvement with the world. With the Malawi, Africa exchange program, the unique Peace Corps Intern Program, and the whole exciting emphasis on International Agricultural Economics, the College added an international aspect to its already diversified programs.

There were twenty-one major B.S. programs within the College, covering everything from Animal Science to Landscape Architecture, Restaurant and Hotel Management to Plant Pathology. The name "College of Agriculture" does not adequately describe the scope of the instructional program. After much research and planning, those working on the curriculum with Dean Spielman had recommended a new more appropriate name for the future: "College of Food, Agricultural and Natural Resource Sciences".

The College of Agriculture dealt with life — real, tangible, breathing, moving, growing life. Hold it in your hand. Help it grow strong. Milk it. Treat it with kindness. Wonder at it. Wonder about it. Learn what you can. Learn to relieve the suffering of a strangling root. With your own hands, draw the milk from a cow. Learn patience and forcefulness. Prepare for living and for earning a living.

... a place to search for hours for the article you want, only to discover that it's written in Russian or out being bound.

... a place to study when your dorm is too noisy and you need a change of scenery.

... a place to live during finals time as the walls lined with books become your second home.

This was Goodell Library. Too small for a school the size of UMass and often criticized for its inefficiency, it had nevertheless become symbolic of the academic side of campus life.

Ah, the introductory sciences, with the great lecture halls and endless labs; the multiple choice exams and the practicals. For the arts majors, a prolonged endurance contest to fill a requirement. For the science majors, another gut to build up the cum. There were the girls with that dreaming look on their faces, and the guys leaning against the backs of their chairs, half asleep from the night before. There were those who took endless notes and those who never used their pens at all. And always, in every lab, there was one who knew his subject well, and always there was a group around him, borrowing notes and asking his advice and making him feel, for the moment at least, like the center of something important.

PLEASE
ROOM CLEAN

In the heat of a cave-that-is-not-a-cave he worked, taking the earth in his hands, twisting it, breaking it, forming shapes and curves where before there was nothing. And when the hours were done, each line, each mark, each word, stood as a testimony to a moment when the man-beast had exceeded his state.

Language Labs . . . a means to proficiency?

Before they graduated, many students had to fulfill the iniquitous language requirement. To achieve this end, most language courses at the elementary level included a laboratory program as a means to bring about repeated associations of phrases as they are heard and read with how they are said.

Although the hours spent in Language Labs are as fondly remembered as the mother courses, they at least precluded much of the embarrassment incurred when the Instructor, in the classroom with all your friends staring at you, would ask, "Wie geht es Ihnen?" and all you could conjure up was an anemic, "Gut?"

Outstanding success in the field of music is dependent upon a long period of study and practice. However, the possession of a natural talent makes the difference between the mere performer and the true artist.

Students enrolled in the music program were given special, individual training and attention to develop their natural talents. With this expert supervision, they could gain the mastery of their art in order to enter the teaching field or the performing arts.

School of Education Experiments with New Approaches

The tone of the activities of the year was experimental; the results were profitable and popular.

Many new approaches to teacher education were instituted by Dean Dwight Allen, including the doubling of the faculty and graduate doctoral candidates, which has enabled the number of courses serving undergraduates to triple. The feeling of oneness and openness existed, for faculty and students were considered to be on an equal level, with both involved in planning and voting through the new Education Assembly. The two Marathons were innovated this year, as was the plan for establishing eleven learning centers within the School of Education. Students will have their choice of signing up for aesthetics, model elementary education teacher program, urban, higher, vocational, distributive, or early childhood education. Pass-fail was used more extensively than before, and plans were formulated for all education courses beginning September 1969 to be pass-fail. At that time, the possibility of receiving credits for learning experiences such as weekend retreats will also become a reality under the credit module scheme.

Student Teacher Training Emphasized The Individual.

The emphasis in teacher training seems to have shifted away from the subject data learning to the phenomenological theory of learning, stressing the meaning of the experience and how it relates to the individual student. Make education relevant was the new cry. Student teachers gained knowledge of themselves and others by living through sensitivity training sessions, and learned how to utilize audio visual aids to a greater and more sophisticated extent in the class room.

New, too, were the seven different kinds of student teaching, from the student interning to cluster programs with methods being taught right in the school system. The hope upon which these new approaches were based is that the actual experiments will give rise to—not the development of a final perfect plan but—a continuing search for the best methods of teaching teachers.

SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING

Engineering at the University of Massachusetts was not confined to paper and pencil work with drafting equipment. Work was being done, below, on apparatus for Magnetohydrodynamics research, the study of high temperature ionized gas, called plasma. At right is a Helium-Neon laser, built as a senior honors project.

A senior project, in Creative Design, was the invention and construction of a vehicle for paraplegics. In this project, a thought has to be translated to full scale drawings, then to a full scale model, and finally to the finished product.

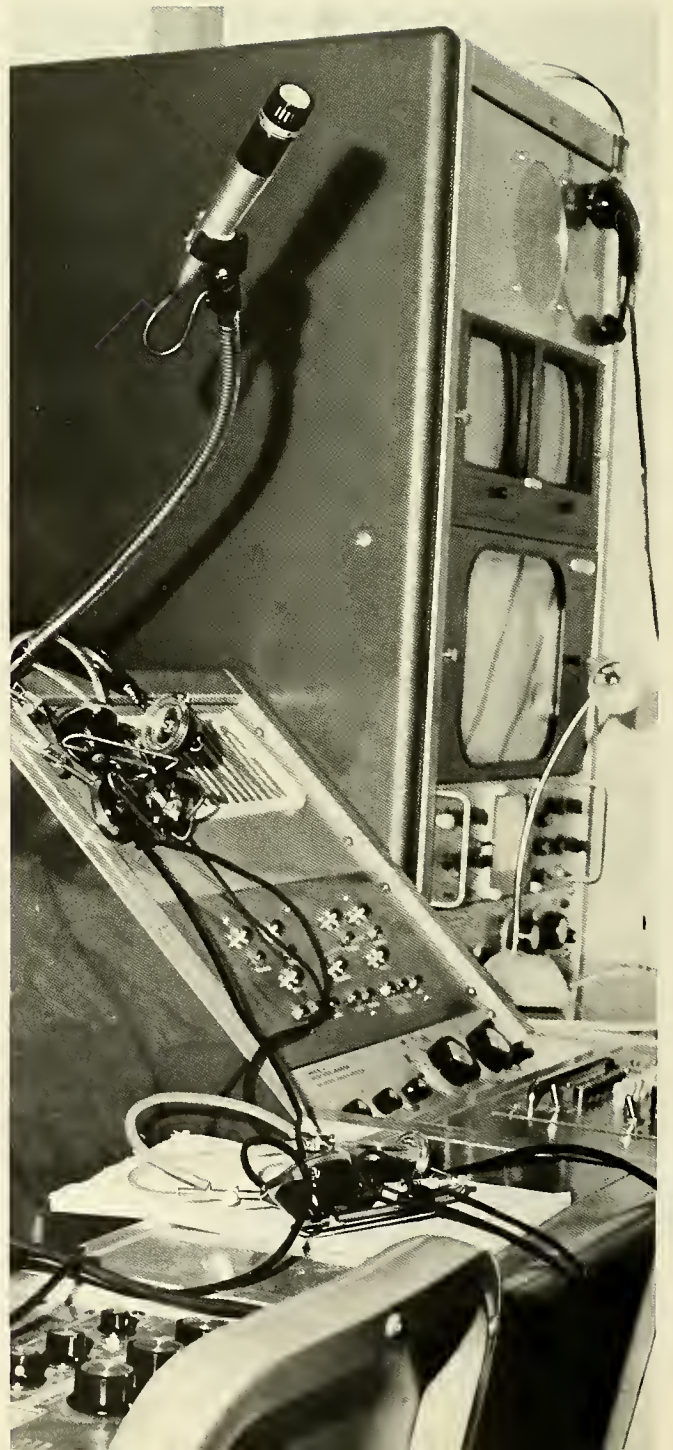

An area of engineering recently coming to the forefront is Ocean Engineering. Here students learn how they must construct apparatus to withstand the currents, pressure and temperature found in a seemingly unnatural environment, the sea.

In all these phases of engineering, the most important idea is the relevance of what is done to human needs. Engineering overlaps into communications, medicine, transportation, and environmental studies. In this overlapping, it adds its knowledge toward the betterment of all.

MASS COMMUNICATIONS

For students wishing to pursue careers in radio, television, and films, courses were offered which taught the procedures and techniques of actual studios. Students were trained for jobs ranging from directing and producing to camera work and broadcasting.

Television, the most modern and revolutionizing form of communication, had allowed man to see history in the making. The television industry, having the tremendous responsibility of providing entertainment as well as news coverage, was in need of creative and imaginative people. Through actual work with equipment, students were able to become expert in the fields of communication they wished to enter.

The Home Economics Department offered a variety of majors. Besides the traditional cooking and sewing courses, students could study Family Management, Merchandising, and Interior Design. Course requirements were changing with the needs of the students and professional demands.

Child Development majors observed and student taught in the Nursery School run by the department. Their professional training included courses in Human Development and Education as well as "Art for the Young Child."

THE CHANGING ROLE OF WOMEN IN SOCIETY

DIVISION OF MILITARY SCIENCE

In the classroom and on the field,
ROTC built confidence,
ROTC built character,
ROTC built men.
Men of confidence and character were an asset to the campus.

*ROTC built soldiers.
Were soldiers necessary on campus?
Some said they were,
but others said no.*

DIVISION OF AIR SCIENCE

Learn how to become an Air Force officer.
Read the books.
Study the charts.
Listen to the officers.
Obey the orders.
Know how to fly.

*If you fly high enough,
you can see the world.
The world is green.
Air Force ROTC could help keep it this way.*

SCHOOL OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

The School of Business continued to offer new channels of sophistication, so that the new graduate could more effectively function in the increasingly complex business world. In this spirit, the School continued to develop the quantification approach to business administration.

Physical Education: Required? Yes. But What Variety!

JOHN WILLIAM LEDERLE

President, University of Massachusetts

1960-1970

FROM HIS RESIGNATION:

... When I came to the University of Massachusetts in 1960 I set for myself ten years as the outside limit of my tenure in presidential office. I have always felt that a president makes his major contributions within his first ten years. Although there are some tasks that remain to be done, after ten years it is better that a board of trustees select a new man, one who can bring new ideas and suggest different educational paths for a university as called for in a day of dynamic social change.

... As I have said many times, "The University is people!" In the popular mind the President gets the credit, but the truth is that any success we have achieved is due to the backing of an outstanding faculty and of a dedicated group of administrators who have worked ably as my administrative team. If there is any discredit, as President I am glad to assume that alone.

... I would be remiss if I did not express my grave concern for the thousands of qualified applicants we must turn away each year. Without greatly increased financial support for public higher education—community colleges, technical institutes, state colleges and the University—thousands of Massachusetts youth will find the door to college slammed shut in the years just ahead, and our greatest natural resource will be lost to us.

... When I leave the presidency next year I should like to return to my professional field of political science in a faculty position where I can teach and do research. This will also permit closer contact with students which I have missed. I shall continue to promote the University's welfare, albeit in a different role. I look forward to the day when the University will truly be recognized as the "People's University," and I will continue to support the Board of Trustees in bringing this dream to fruition on behalf of the youth of the Commonwealth.

1964-

A really nice guy both in and out of his office, the Provost in 1968-1969 was somebody who more of us should have gotten to know. A lot of us—almost all of us, as a matter of fact—were affected in one way or another by the doings of his office. But it was kind of sad that we never really got to know him, the man, and even sadder that his as-yet-unaccepted resignation may forever take away our chance to make his acquaintance.

WILLIAM FIELD DEAN OF STUDENTS

Dean Field. They called him when some of us decided this Spring that enough was enough and D. O'Connell & Sons were too much. That tree stayed though others fell. They called Dean Field when some of us decided to spend the night in Whitmore. We're still not sure who won that one. But they called Dean Field when we wanted to abolish curfews, establish open houses, and whenever we needed a friend in Fort Lederle. It was nice to know he was there.

He had a lot to say, too — about curfews, parietals, booze, and student-teacher relationships in general. Most of what he said finally found its way to ears higher than his, and his work here at UMass seems done. He's leaving us now, and we'll miss him. Thanks, Dr. Noffsinger. And Good Luck.*

ROBERT McCARTNEY

University Secretary

No' he's not THAT kind of secretary. He doesn't handle John Lederle's correspondence, or greet visitors in the President's outer office. He's the kind of Secretary who acts as liason between you and the Board of Trustees when you are trying to get something across to the Board. He handles University public relations, too, directing many of the programs for visitors and others. He also, by the way, likes YAHOO.

WILLIAM D. TUNIS

Dean of Admissions

Bill Tunis' office was the first contact you ever had with UMass. When you were a high school senior, you wrote and asked him for an application and a school catalogue. You filled it out, mailed it back, waited, and hoped. You were one out of twenty thousand who applied, and one of the three thousand who were accepted.

ROBERT HOPKINS DEAN OF MEN

When you wanted to get a car on campus, and you were a male freshman, you talked to Dean Hopkins. You also talked to him if you were naughty and broke a school rule. But you could go to him with your problems, too. And enjoy talking to him.

WILLIAM RICHARDS ASSISTANT DEAN OF MEN

If you were a TEP or a QTV in 1968-1969, chances were that you knew the path to Bill Richard's office. Chances also were that you weren't very happy about it.

ROBERT C. JONES

Registrar

Dropping or adding? Trying to get out of P.E.? Conning somebody into letting you out of a course two days before the Final? For these, and 1001 other reasons, the Registrar's is one of the busiest places on campus. Grades, schedules, everything academic seems to originate or terminate in this corner of Whitmore. Sort of makes some of us wonder what we're doing with all these other buildings.

HELEN CURTIS

Dean of Women

From one end of Sorority Row to the other, from Theta to Chi O, Dean Curtis has left and continues to leave her impression on the efforts of UMass girls to rise among the best systems in the country. Her efforts on behalf of Mortar Board (Senior Women's Honor Society) and numerous other groups on campus have left many of us glad to have known and worked with her.

MICHAEL D. MELLEY

University Relations

Dan Melley's office did its best all year to keep the state aware of our existence. He put out publicity on everything from contemporary dance performances in Bowker to fraternity happenings on North Pleasant Street. Oh — and HIS office is the source of all those little white bulletins that all you Student Leaders got in the mail every week. SOMEBODY had to keep you up on what's going on.

To many, 1968-69 marked the beginning: the start of unimagined academic pressures, social whirls, and the chance to see the performer thought not to be real; to wade through pools of construction mud and mounds of snow; to flit from one mixer to another; or just to see what lived in the rear of the Hatch. But to a few less, it marked the end of a way of life: a freedom lost, yet evermore pursued.

The Day of Awareness: It Was a Chance to Become.

On Thursday, September 26, roughly 300 of us saw fit to congregate by the Student Union to face a barrage of speeches aimed at involving us with the popular-critical issues ranging in scope from Campus to National. From the MLK Social Action Council, Gil Salk told us to get on top of our world, and Rev. Hardy expressed of the inhumanity of waiting for the "establishment" to solve our problems. Afro-Am's

Robert Henderson warned us of the "Tempest" of racial conflict which would come in apathy's wake. A French Prof. Jack Deaver apotheosized conscientious objectors. Fred Moore, New England Committee for Non Violent Action, exhorted us to destroy draft files and passively resist civil authorities, to thereby effect an overthrow of the government. And finally, Sam Ajiri beseeched us to act on the inhuman conditions in Africa.

You might have asked yourself the question, "Why don't more people show up at these affairs?" Or, if your bias ran the other way, "Why do that many people actually bother with the same old attempts to stop the war and feed the poor?"

But venturing and marching to the Student Union lawn that day, we came: some out of a banal curiosity, and some to hear their political priests incant once again; yet others came forward out of a desire to further understand the nature of their own world by understanding that of others, to find out what really matters—and what to do about it, to realize their own existence, to Become.

100 Black UMass Students Stage Whitmore Sit-In; Request Action on 22 Demands by Monday at 12 noon

Protest Results

Following Racial Incident Thursday

BY BILL HENDERSON

Senior Staff Writer

The Student Afro-American Organization has issued a list of 22 demands and a ultimatum to the University Administration.

One of the demands is for a meeting between black students and the Board of Trustees to discuss the problem of black students at the University.

The action stemmed from the beating of a black student on the campus and his white student companion Thursday night by five unidentified white students.

The demands were formulated at a meeting of black students late Thursday night following the incident, and presented to President John W. Lederle and Dean of Students William F. Field in the lobby of Whitmore after a march by about 100 black students. A spokesman for the group, Robert Henderson, chairman of the Afro-American group, read the list to the administrators and the group and then announced, "We will expect a yes decision on all of these points by twelve o'clock Monday. If not, we will be back Tuesday with bigger and better things."

The demands listed are:

1.) A public apology from the administration. 2.) Police: a minimum of 15 black policemen; take guns away from police; fire Chief Blasko, Lieut. Schwartz and Officer Shankard; sensitivity training for all police. 3.) Compulsory meeting of all students to explain consequences of any racist behavior. 4.) Black curriculum with black teachers. 5.) Black doctors in Infirmary and in Mental Health. 6.) Recruitment of out-of-state black students disregarding 5% rule. 7.)

ABOUT 100 UNIVERSITY Black students marched from Mills house to the Whitmore Administration Building this morning to protest an incident last night in which a black man was beaten by five white students. The protesting students staged a brief sit-in in Whitmore while their leader read a list of demands to President John W. Lederle and Dean of Students William F. Field. (MDC photos by Mike Alpert)

Sensitivity training for house officers, I.F.C., fraternity and sorority officers; compulsory black-white encounters. 8.) More money for Student Afro-American Organization. 9.) No black student to flunk out this semester. Any black student who misses an exam or class because of participation in march is not to be penalized. 10.) Afro-Am will remain in Mills House. Money from University for refurbishing of Mills House. 11.) Money from University for black arts festival. 12.) More black administrators and staff (counselors, heads of residence, food services, student personnel, athletic staff). 13.) Sensitivity training for professors. 14.) Representative of Afro-Am to be on interviewing board for any black staff and faculty and reviewing committee for any outline for black curriculum. 15.) Rooms in the new Campus Center to be named for black heroes. 16.) Any staff person who acts in an offensive manner toward any black student will be brought before a reviewing board. If found guilty, the person will be fired. This board will include representation from black students. 17.) Within the area decided on for housing of C.C.E.N.S. students in fall, each student will be required to attend sensitivity training and black-white encounter groups. 18.) Black students will be involved in freshman orientation and black freshman will attend a black orientation. 19.) Meeting with Board of Trustees and black students. 20.) Clear explanation of sanctions to be taken against any dorm or fraternity which shows any form of racist behavior e.g., suspension of open house privileges, cut-off of R.S.O. funds.

The group also demanded the apprehension and immediate expulsion of the five attackers.

Following the presentation of these demands, the group quietly left the administration building. Later Pres. Lederle told the Daily Collegian "We will sympathetically look at these, but some things are beyond our control."

Regarding the demand for the immediate expulsion of the five white students when caught, he said, "I would assume it would be handled through regular University channels" although the two victims can bring criminal complaints if they want.

While he didn't want to comment on the whole list before studying it, Lederle did say that the "dogmatism" of the black students "might destroy the climate in which we are trying to work things out... but I think they understand this."

NIGHT OF INQUIRY

On Friday, November 15, the M.L.K.S.A.C. sponsored a new type of educational experience at UMass: "Night of Inquiry — Student Power" was an all night teach-in, to bring out, by means of panel discussion and audience participation, as many different interpretations of Student Power as were possible. Members of such diverse organizations as the Student Senate, SDS, Inter-Fraternity Council, Student Afro American Organization, COLLEGIAN, M.L.K.S.A.C., and others were on panels together.

Over the night, about 2,000 people attended, with as many as 900 at one time; an indication of the program's success was a 7 a.m. head count of roughly 200 bleary-eyed but concerned students.

The program was run on a plan providing for 1½ hours of discussion followed by 30 minutes of entertainment consisting of folk singing, blues, and jug bands. The King Council sold sandwiches, coffee and books to pay for the program but lost $450. They had no regrets.

Unfortunately, as with most events of that type, too many people were there as spectators to watch the freaks perform their rites of anarchy, but many others spoke on relevant issues; they were heard.

R.O.T.C.? YES! "We're For the Right to Choose."

To become an officer in the military of the United States, the male UMie had the choice of joining the Reserve Officer Training Corps (R.O.T.C.) or taking his chances with an in-service program. To many, the work and benefits of an officer was more desirable than that of an enlisted man; it was a matter for personal choice and discretion.

However, in 1968, a certain small, but significant fringe on the campus figured out for themselves that they were better qualified to choose and evaluate the merits of R.O.T.C. They had it all figured out: IT was BAD. Nobody should be allowed to take IT.

R.O.T.C.? NO! "We're For A Democratic Society."

One good way to whittle enrollment was to abolish its academic credit, on grounds that the fruit of the course wasn't intellectually juicy enough: too much patriotic dogma. (Do some of you remember when the marking pens ran red whenever your writings were unsympathetic to the political ideologies of certain outspoken instructors who graded them: if you didn't agree, you must be stupid and graded accordingly.) It was tactically a good move, since widespread student disillusionment with a corrupt war helped to mold R.O.T.C. into a surrogate blob of evil, and something to pounce on.

Royal Flush Is
Nancy Viall

In the Ballroom of the Student Union the crowd moved about in a darkness broken only by the weak lights over the tables. The air was warm. They talked and sometimes shouted and pushed against one another as they passed from one table to the next, their hands filled with paper money. In the center of them, men wearing red and white striped jackets bent over roulette wheels, tossed dice, and dealt cards. This was Las Vegas Night. Set in the middle of November between Homecoming and Sendoff, it marked the third year in which the members of Alpha Phi Omega and Gamma Sigma Sigma had worked to raise money for the Heart Fund by imitating the activities of a gambling casino. As usual, it sponsored a queen; this year, Nancy Viall gained the title.

Before the Mud:

This was the winter that was and was and was . . . a winter of the worst storm in a decade that forced even the University to cancel classes after 3 o'clock . . . a winter of snowmen and slush and sleds contrived from dining commons trays . . . a winter of storms that always seemed to come on Monday . . . a winter of the Hong Kong Flu and icy paths and 60 m.p.h. winds . . . This was the winter that was 1969.

Through the Snow Came the Music

The excitement had been mounting all week. It was as if the whole campus were holding its breath and waiting. At last Friday arrived and with it the promise of the weekend, but this weekend was different. Winter Carni had been begun. The theme "From Both Sides Now" was evident throughout, especially in the contrast of performers. The gamut ran from the soul rock of the Chambers Brothers to the folk rock of Richie Havens and Jaime Brockett all the way to the Latin sound of Sergio Mendes and Brazil '66. Then before we knew it, the weekend was over. It had been rushed and frantic, but maybe that was half the fun. We all drugged off to classes with memories and hangovers a little more spectacular than usual, but at least we had the strains of "Time" and "Fool on a Hill" running through our heads to offset the Monday Morning blahs.

A year ago in April, Dr. Martin Luther King was assassinated. In honor of his memory, the Class of '70 and the Distinguished Visitors Program brought Hubert H. Humphrey to campus to deliver a memorial address. In addition to the lecture the former Vice President actually spoke to, and with the students, as he went from one end of campus to the other. He spent time speaking to the C.C.E.B.S. students and with the press, and shook hands with thousands at Memorial Hall. Shortly after 11 p.m., at a barn rented by Chi Omega, Mr. Humphrey made a surprise appearance, culminating a tiring if not hurculean day.

MAY 30: SENIOR DAY

It began early in the afternoon when a few undergraduates, tired of walking aimlessly about the campus and more than a little disturbed by their makeshift rooms in the Quad, settled down on the grass by the tent, some in anticipation of the show of legs and midriiffs made inevitable by Summer Fashion, others — of being watched. A short while later the lines were formed: one for the usual chicken barbecue dinner, one for the mugs with the funny little “69” stenciled on them, one for coke, one for beer — and within an hour the place had an atmosphere of its own. Despite a nearly constant threat of rain, a peculiar warmth to the beer, and a tendency for the coke to go flat, the Seniors succeeded admirably in letting the struggle for existence pass for another day.

It was good to sit in the warmth again, with my legs stretched out across the grass and the sound of laughing still around me. Here at last was a momentary pause in which to feel the passing of friends, in a handshake or in a scribbled address shoved quickly into my grasp. I was grateful for this final day, coming after the last annoyance of final exams and set before the clamor of graduation, and without ever knowing it, or him, I said a quiet thank-you to Pete Lewenberg.

And Too Soon,
the
Year Ended.

I moved into a different world then, one without shouting voices and bands and clapping feet. Around me there was silence, broken only by the warm air of summer gently moving over the leaves and by the quiet sounds which tell that the night has just settled in. Of all the things which had happened, only rubble, tossed by the edge of the path, remained. For me, this was the last day.

But the idea would go on. The idea that was here long before this generation first looked upon the college hidden in the New England countryside, or raised its empty faces to the blankness of her walls, or sounded its weak footsteps across her streets. A thought formed in the minds of a dozen men before the woods were cut or the water spoiled; of a free society of educated human beings, able both to use their power and maintain it.

Sport is more than playing the game. Sport is the hours of practice, the discipline, the sore muscles, and the hours of preparation for maybe only a one minute race. Sport is giving your full effort, the pride that comes with winning, and for some reason still enjoying the game if you lose. Sport is the strength of a gymnast, the endurance of a runner, the speed of a swimmer, the timing of a pole-vaulter, the power of a tackle, the cleverness of a coach, the teamwork of crew: the skill of an athlete.

The season started auspiciously on a putridly hot Saturday against traditional opener, the Maine Black Bears. The freshmen huddled hopefully in Section 10 eager to rid themselves of the hated beanies, with the first UMass touchdown. Maine scored first. An evil omen? A portent? A preview of things to come? No, Maine was always tough against UMass. The Redmen would get them.

Joy, shouting, and flying beanies prevailed as Tim Adams reared back and zinged a scoring strike to tight end, Alan Becker. Sure, that was it; just a slow start. WE'RE ROLLING NOW. The Redmen returned to the field and beat the hapless Black Bears about the skull for the entire second half.

We all left with pleasant thoughts of the coming season and went down to the Pub for a couple of coolies.

The next Friday night, we sat around, horrified, as Glenn Briere told of the shellacking administered under the lights of War Memorial Stadium in dear old Buffalo. The Redmen were smashed and trampled by a herd of hungry Bulls.

The Season Went On . . .

O.K. So we lost to Buffalo. They were a very tough team; maybe a little out of our league. A lot of the season remained. And we were still undefeated in the Yankee Conference.

We were shocked by the loss to Buffalo. The next week we listened in disbelief at how we lost to Delaware. Blowing leads of 13-0 and 23-13, the Redmen seemed to give the game away, losing four fumbles and seeing three Adams passes stolen. It was the first Homecoming Game Vic Fusia had lost, home or away, since coming to UMass.

It wasn't going to be the last. And we now looked forward to returning to the friendly confines of Alumni Stadium.

Did we say "friendly"? The Redmen dropped their third straight to the Terriers of Boston University. A solid effort by a Randy Robinson-led defense was joined by continued offensive attacks of fumble-itis and the dropsies. The slow start that we had accepted as typical of UMass football teams had yet to be overcome. And the season was nearly half over.

At Rhode Island the following week, we sat in silent agony as the Rams broke UMass' 15-game Conference winning streak. Memories of past Redmen last-minute victories were dredged up as they tried valiantly to pull it out at the end. But a 40-yard Adams-to-Warnock touchdown and another good defensive effort went for naught. We lost, and the Redmen were, for the first time in three years, no longer unbeaten in the Conference.

And we went down to the Pub for a lot of coolies.

And On . . .

*A sad kind of season.
Wet and muddy, like rainy Saturdays when you were a kid and had to stay inside.
All you could do was remember other Saturdays when it was sunny and then think of Saturdays to come, when the sun would again be bright and warm.*

*That kind of season.
But the beginning was so good, so full of hope, so filled with promise. So many good backs,
a fine new quarterback, returning lettermen,
so many promising sophomores.

. . . And On . . .

After Rhode Island, we returned to Alumni Stadium and Homecoming. Seventeen Thousand of us watched UConn extend the Redman Losing streak to five games. And Vic Fusia lost his second Homecoming Game of the season. The first at home. A brilliant passing display by Tim Adams just wasn't enough as another last minute UMass surge failed.

For the Seniors, our first Homecoming loss. For Vic Fusia, his fifth loss. For UMass, the Yankee Conference cellar.

But, ah, Vermont. Tim Adams passed for two and ran for two. Pat Scavone was named ECAC Soph of the Week for his great running game. Marty Scheralis booted seven consecutive extra-points. A game that finally saw the Redmen put it all together.

Only, a little late.

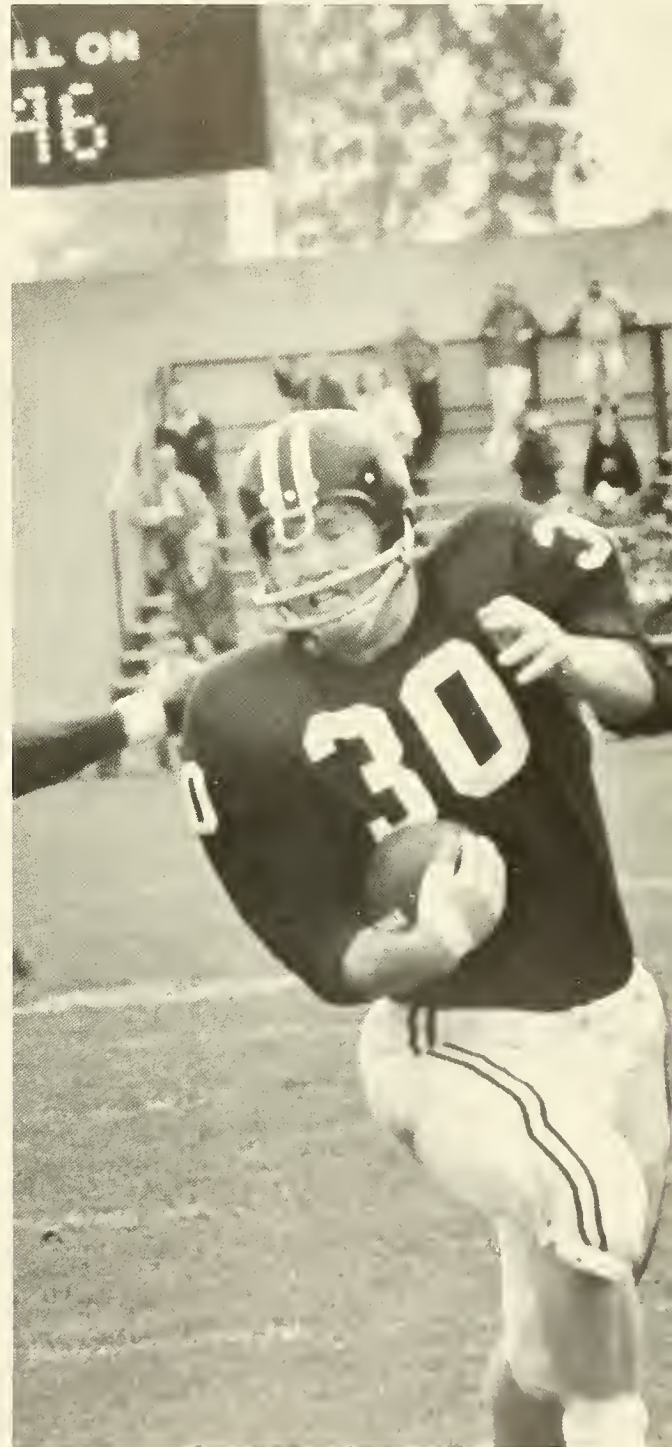

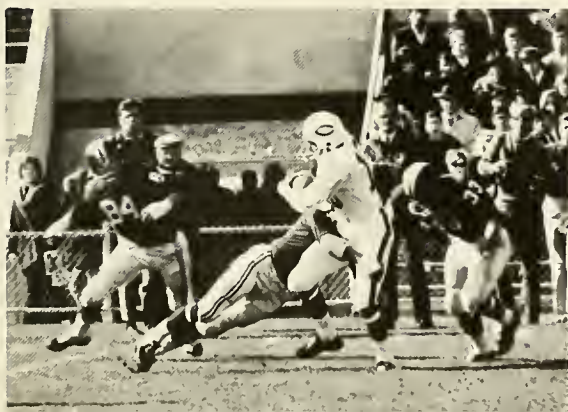

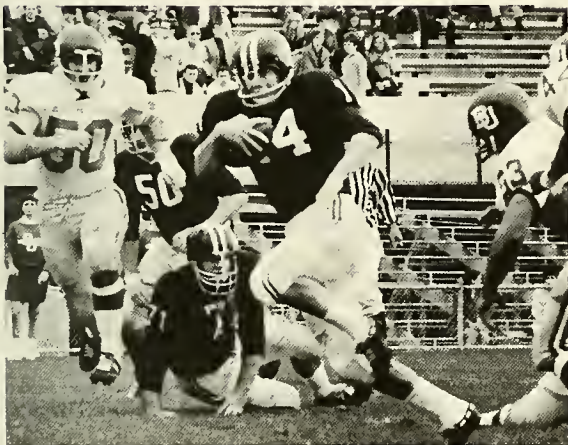

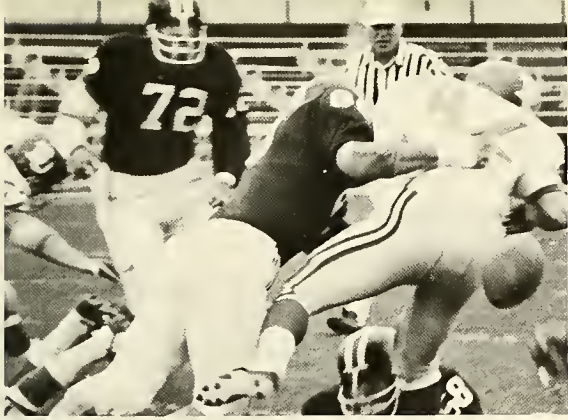

Holy Cross. And a doomed coach who tastelessly ran up the score against a battered Redman squad. Our running attack floundered again, and UMass went down for the sixth time this season.

By now, we began to despair of a winning season.

But we could still win the Conference title. Just beat New Hampshire and hope that Rhode Island loses to UConn.

But it only worked out part of that way. Rhode Island did lose to UConn. But we lost to New Hampshire. Three first downs. Sixty-two yards total offense. Only 8,000 showed up, the season low. We lose the Conference title. And the Eagles are next.

Boston College and UMass. Action was resumed at Alumni Stadium for the last time in 1968. Throughout the game, the Massachusetts team had a remarkably brilliant defense. "It was a tough act to follow."

But HEROICS, a seemingly lost word for the Redmen this season, could have been justifiably uttered as a little known, second string quarterback was able to extract something of the old pride, reviving the once held notion that UMass was a force to be reckoned with. Ken Hughes, substituting for Tim Adams, forwarded his way into the book of records with a touch-down hit to tight end Nick McGarry.

See you next year, Ken.

A determined team effort usually pays off. It did for UMass on the day they met Boston College, although the final score was to favor the visitors, 21 to 6. The Redmen held . . . and held . . . and held through three quarters of a stubbornly played game. Any fan could rightfully have said, "Never has a team looked so great in defeat."

UConn goalie, Herbie Hind, soars to stop another great shot by the Redman.

SOCCER

Led by co-captains Wilkie Ward and Bob Dubiel, the Redmen Varsity Soccer Team completed its 1968 season with a 4-6-1 record that included a 2-3 Yankee Conference mark. Individual performances during the trying season earned All Conference Honors on the second team for Redmen fullback Bill Sanborn, halfbacks Dick Matusczak and Dick Meyer, and wing Steve Blanchette.

The leading scorer for the Redmen was Duane Brown with ten goals. Senior goalie, Steve Kramer, was selected the team's most valuable player for 1968. He turned aside 115 shots for the season.

After defeating their first two opponents, Maine and Boston College, the Redmen lost a heartbreaking game to Connecticut. From that point on, the team's fortunes steadily declined: mental lapses, inconsistencies, and tough breaks contributed to the outcome. However, the team managed to pull together and win the last game of the season against New Hampshire.

BASKETBALL

The 1968-69 Redman Basketball season opened with question marks concerning experience at several positions. However, under the firm direction of Coach Jack Leaman, UMass completed its most successful season ever while it chalked up a 17-7 record, tied the school record for most wins, and won its second consecutive Yankee Conference with a 9-1 conference mark.

The team was rated as one of the top three teams in New England and narrowly missed a post-season National Invitational Tourney Bid.

Picking out the highlights of such a great season is no easy task. However, wins over Providence, Syracuse, and Navy away, and big home wins over Fordham and Iona, have to be ranked as important victories. The Boston College game saw fans turned away from seeing their team narrowly miss defeating the favored Eagles.

Many team members were honored including Peter Gayeska (50), who was second team All-New England, All-Yankee Conference, and voted the Most Valuable UMass player. Joe DiScarcina (10), whose lengthy absences due to injury prevented an even greater season, set school assist records and was voted honorary captain of the All-Yankee Conference team. Ray Ellerbrook (12) was a third team All-New England pick, while also being on the All Yankee Conference team. Dennis Chapman (40), Jack Gallagher (24), Dick Samuelson (44), John Shockro (22), Bob Dempsey (32), John Dreyer (52), Bill Greely (20), and Dick Starsiak (14) did their part in making this the greatest basketball season in UMass history.

Hockey

It was quite a year for Coach Jack Canniff's slick skating sextet as they tied a 38 year old record for the most wins in a season. The 1930 ice team had won 9, and that record stood until this year.

Jeff Sanborn erased a 1956 record for most points by compiling a career total of 81. He topped the old record by a hat trick in the next to last game of the season. Sanborn was named to the ECAC Division II team, the first UMass player to earn this distinction.

Highlights of the season were defeating cross town rival Amherst College 4-0 and 12-3, crushing Holy Cross 13-2 and UConn 7-1.

Lacrosse

In a sport that combines the speed of track with the running of basketball, the contact of football, and the general mayhem of roller derby, the Redmen, coached by Dick Garber, were among the best in the country. An undefeated, 10-0, season led Garber's Guerillas to the Taylor Cup, symbol of supremacy in New England Lacrosse. A successful pre-season spring trip into the heart of Lacrosse country, New Jersey and Maryland, with scrimmages against national powerhouses Navy and Princeton, showed that UMass Lacrosse was as good as any in the nation.

The team was exciting to watch at all times, with an offense that averaged 19.2 goals a game and a defense that wasn't afraid to knock people down anywhere, on or off the field. At the beginning of the season, we looked forward to watching the attack line of Kevin "the fox" O'Connor, a returning All-American, Tom Malone, a transfer from Long Island and the leading scorer in the country a year ago, and big Carl Schultheis, a transfer, and quickly rated a sure All-American selection and perhaps the greatest Lacrosse player UMass had ever seen. They didn't disappoint us.

Schultheis, after dominating play in the pre-season trip and through the first 3 regular season games, suffered a knee injury that put him out for the season. For him, it was a long and sad year, sitting on the sidelines rooting for his team, wasting his last year of eligibility. Carl was, in the few games we saw him in, truly a great player.

Gary Vassar ably filled the gap, scoring 26 goals and 24 assists for 50 points. O'Connor ended the season with 79 points on 39 goals and 30 assists, and Malone led the team with 84 points, breaking school records with 40 goals and 44 assists.

The defense was also something to see. Returning All-New England goalie Mark "the muffin" Schlossberg and sophomore Johnny Orr combined with hard-hitting junior Bill Devore and senior Tom Tufts to provide the kind of contact that left the often-crowded hillside behind Boyden roaring with applause and excitement. At times it seemed a shame that the rugged UMass defense was so overshadowed by the incredible attack.

The season ended on happy notes for almost everyone, undefeated, Taylor Cup winners, coach Garber's 100th victory, and a congratulatory telegram from Senator Ted Kennedy, Little All-American selections for Kevin O'Connor and Tom Malone, and nomination to the North-South All Star game for O'Connor, Steve Connolly, Tufts, and "Muffin".

BASEBALL

After losing 6 out of 7 games on their early season southern trip, defeating only Wake Forest, the Redmen lost only 3 of their remaining 19 games. The team finished the regular season with an 18-8 record, losing only one Yankee Conference game to Maine while winning 9. As conference champions they entered a double elimination tournament with Boston University and Dartmouth for the New England Division One championship. B.U. beat Dartmouth 13-10 and then UMass beat Dartmouth 5-2 to eliminate them from the playoffs. The Redmen then defeated B.U. 8-6 and 6-1 to become the New England Division One representative to the College World Series.

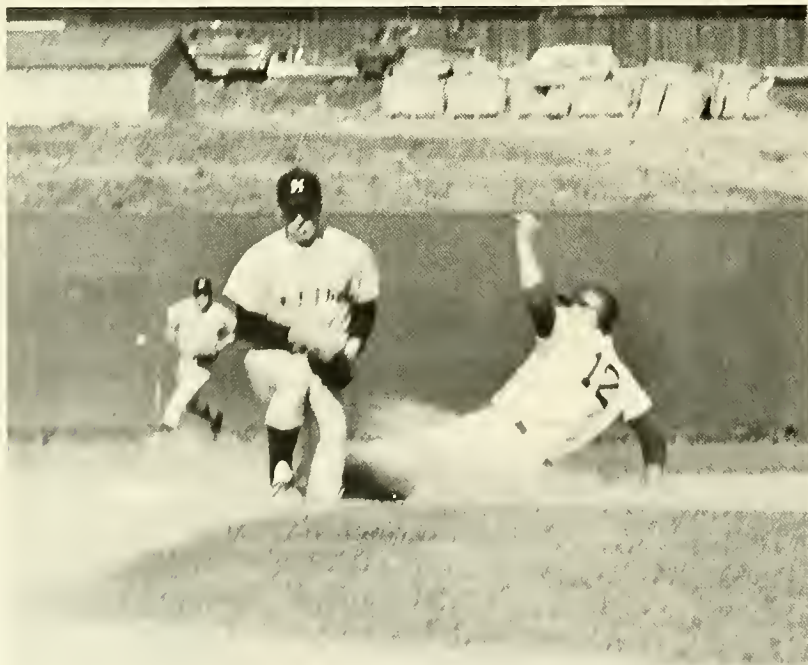

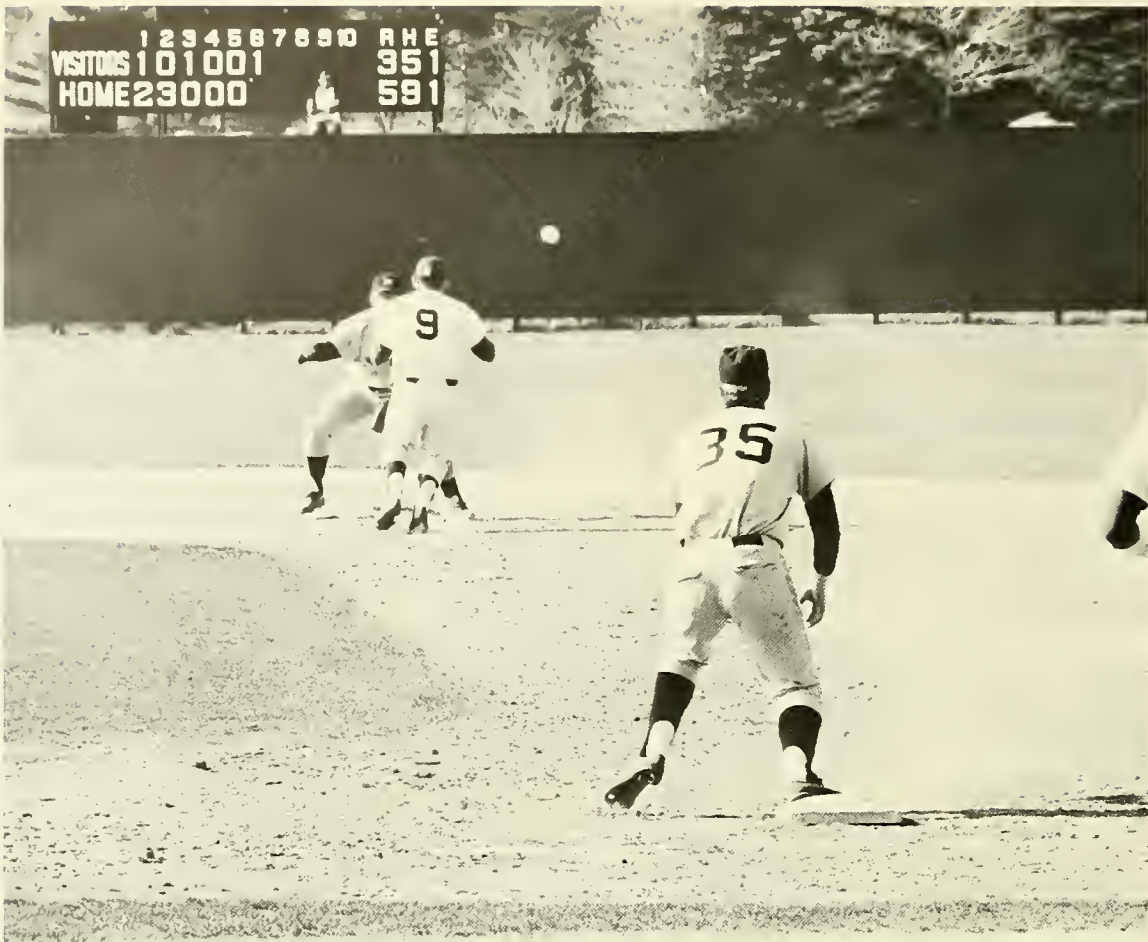

The team posted a .300 batting average for the regular season with seven players over this mark. Bob Hansen again led the team with a .344 average, followed closely by next years captain Ray Ellerbrook at .343. Catcher Tony Chinappi batted .326, Short Stop Joe DiScarcina .316, and Second Baseman Tom Semino hit .307. Outfielders Mitch Salnick and Dick Pepin slugged .315 and .308 respectively.

Add to this Don Anderson's 7 wins, 1 loss and John Kitchen's 6 wins, 1 loss record, and Coach Bergquists efficient tactics. It is easy to see how they won the New England Championship.

And at the 3670th meeting of the Student Senate, it most likely will still be told—"In glancing back . . ."—of how the euphorinium logic of Fredrick P. Hartwell V helped to achieve it.

The Student Senate was, without doubt, THE Organization of organizations. Like the publicized minutes of their meetings, an objective description of its nature and function only scratches the surface of the Senate's significance on our social, academic, and personal lives, or, of how it was achieved.

What then was this powerful body of fellow undergraduates? Structurally, the Senate was composed of 90 or so students (a number which varied from month to month) who severally represented roughly 140 other students.

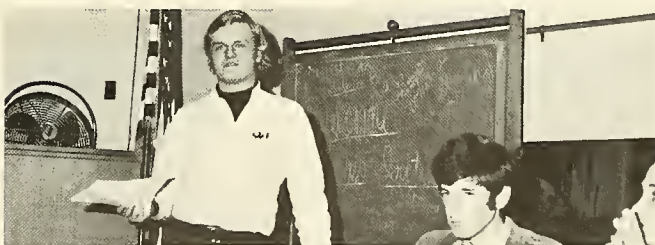

Election records indicated that almost one out of three Senators won their seats without opposition; whether as individuals their qualifications and platforms were overwhelming so as to discourage others from running against them, or, whether they were the only ones who bothered to run, was too risky to posit. The Records also suggested that of the Senators who faced competition at the polls, only a third of their constituents managed overcoming the obstacles to voting for anyone. But if the Student Body was afflicted with a bit of Apathy, you couldn't say that of the Student Senate: each Senator devoted on the average of not less than 10 hours weekly to the task of developing a better Recipe for the physical, spiritual, cultural, social, financial, and pleasurable environment of their peers.

Each Senator belonged to at least one of nine standing committees: Finance, a big brother when organizations sought guidance to fulfill their financial obligations; Budgets, the agency charged with preparatory work on budgets of organizations totally or partially supported by the Student Activities Tax Fund; Ways and Means, to discover the bad things done by any recognized group; Activities, a review board on all charters of residence halls, groups, and clubs; Services, the committee which dealt with food, housing, and student working conditions; Academic Affairs, ever endeavoring to improve our educational environment; Public Relations, to further the understandings between the Senate and other groups, and those among groups, and to help acquaint new students with what was happening; Student Government Affairs, charged with assuring the proper conduct of elections and the consideration of questions relating to the means and ends of student government; and Student Matters, addressed to review the rules of student conduct and the maintenance and improvement of judiciaries. Many non-Senators worked on those committees, having enjoyed full voting rights.

The Senate could not, however, impose its will in the sense that their acts, resolves, and "binding clauses" automatically became law. The limit of their power was to recommend those pieces of legislation to the Dean of Students and ultimately to the Board of Trustees. Virtually all Senate recommendations relating to internal student affairs were rubber-stamped into Law by the Administration.

Among the significant acts and resolves legislated by this year's Senate included: a new campus bus, to make the Ed. building closer and Orchard Hill lower; a new Picketing Code, which made occupying a building less restrictive and hazardous; changes in the size and composition of S.G.A. Judiciaries, to increase their effectiveness; the withdrawal of the Administration's proposed Room Rent Deposit; increased student wages; Academic Reform, including a study on R.O.T.C.'s academic merit; elimination of curfews for second semester Freshman Coeds; $30,000 for the Continuing Collegiate Education of Black Students program; and a $400,000-plus Student Activities Tax. The Senate also authored a new constitution binding on the Student Body, which provided a ten point Bill of Rights for Students, and rather sweeping powers for itself.

Thus, the Student Senate existed, structurally, as a highly complex organism whose branches entwined virtually every facet of university life. The Senate was therefore firmly at the center of developing Student Self-Determination and Unification—STUDENT POWER—a position which was at once a charge and an opportunity. And for some Senators, it was a chance for personal magnitude . . .

ular election of the Senate President on the grounds that students were not qualified to elect him. Another example of the Senate's intrusion in an area in which it does not have jurisdiction is the Melavampe Award. The senior class objected to the Senate's attempt to take over control of the Award-selection Committee. This is a traditional four-class committee which selects an outstanding faculty member or administrator for a $1000 stipend. Now the Senate has seen fit to take over this money.

Although the committee realizes it is too late for any specific action this semester, the group of juniors who were present last night will be able to organize and to continue the work in the fall to defeat the Constitution. The committee was informed by Senator Frederic Hartwell that if there is anything fallacious in today's broadside, the group will be taken before General Court.

makes no difference whether this is accomplished from the inside out or vice versa. The substance, not the form, is crucial.

A new constitution must be submitted to the people for approbation or disapprobation. All amendments to the constitution must be approved or disapproved by referendum, or other more democratic means than now proposed.

The president of the student body should be elected by all the students, not by a ruling elite.

The integrity of area and house governments must be not only not jeopardized, but enhanced.

In short, the democratic processes must be returned in no small part to the people, who are the cause of both their existence and effectiveness, the focal point of their viability and visibility, both the parent of democracy and its potential executioner.

Derivation of "Publius"

Publius was the pseudonym used by Alexander Hamilton, John Jay, and James Madison in writing the Federalist papers in the early days of the United States. The purpose of the Federalist papers was to explain to the people, primarily of New York, but to the rest of the infant country as well, various aspects of the new constitution. The intent of the authors was to secure support for a complicated legal document, that, in addition to its esoteric legalisms, was radical and thus less likely of general support. It was felt by the S.L.A.P. Steering Committee that it would be an appropriate name for a broadside dealing with what we feel is a constitutional crisis in our own microcosmic society.

STUDENT SENATE PARANOID OVER POWER GRAB CHARGE

A group of 40 concerned students from all segments of campus life met last night in the Hampshire Room of the Student Union to discuss a plan to "arrest and reverse" the increasing number of "power grabs" on the part of the Student Senate.

Acting under the name Student Leaders Action Program (S.L.A.P.), the group is concerned with exposing to the student body the inadequacies and dangers of the new Student Government Constitution. The Student Senate not only wrote the Constitution, but reserves for itself the sole power to amend. This is a luxury enjoyed by no other democratic body in the world. Also there is no provision for checks in the form of judicial review.

In objecting to the "creeping centralization of power" in the hands of the Student Senate, members of the SLAP steering committee were adamant in their complaint about restricting binding clauses, as proposed by the Senate, on their organizations' budgets.

To insure that the entire student body will be given a chance to vote on the new Constitution, the members of the committee collected more than the required 240 signatures to demand a referendum. But the Student Senate, aware of this action, voted to put the constitution on a referendum. Leaders of the SLAP steering committee denounced the Senate action as a "common ploy to divert attention from the central issues."

To pinpoint its concern, the steering committee presented a policy statement (at right) which was endorsed by individual student leaders agreeing with the aims of the policy. Among these goals are the decentralization of power and a demand for the popular election of a student body president.

Sandy Ross, President of the Student Union Board of Governors, objected to the Senate's plan to have the Senate President choose the members of the governing board. Presently the members are elected democratically. Said Ross: "Whatever the Senate is not abolishing, it is taking over."

The Senate also proposed an amendment to the SWAP budget Sunday night which would have destroyed the integrity of the SWAP committee. It proposed a central screening committee composed of the Senate president, or his representative, one representative from the Provost's office, a representative of Afro-Am, a representative from the King Council and only three SWAP committee members.

Previously each dorm or organization had been allowed to choose its own representatives. Members of SWAP threatened to dissolve their committee if the amendment passed because they felt the organization is capable of doing their own choosing. For-

Unfortunately, the SWAP budget also passed last night without the restrictive amendment.

The DAILY COLLEGE editor-in-chief, Donald A. Epstein, cited the problems of the newspaper's budget. Epstein pointed out the Budgets Committee amendment that would strike the words a "free and responsible press" from the flag. Another restrictive amendment involved editing campus comment letters. Epstein observed, "The senate is trying to do too much in too short a span of time."

Wayne Thomas, senior class president, said "There is no point in having a Constitution if the body that wrote it can amend it at whim."

Thomas noted that the Student Senate president is considered the official student body representative. "A president with this much power and who is our official representative ought to be elected by democratic vote of the entire student body," Thomas said. The Student Senate voted down the non-

SLAP Policy Statement

The power of a democratic government ultimately rests with the people, who give the government legitimacy.

Elected representatives are and must be servants of their electors, responsive to their needs and responsible to them to the extent that the government's legitimacy itself derives from the electorate.

Just as the government is required to preserve the rights of its citizens, so are the citizens required to protect their own rights if it becomes apparent that the government cannot or will not.

When the government moves into areas which are not traditionally or necessarily its concern, areas which are being handled competently and honorably, then one feels constrained to ask: "Why?"

If a satisfactory answer cannot be obtained, then it is the right of every citizen -- more than that, his duty -- to protest against any and all such unwarranted intrusions into affairs not primarily the government's concern.

Granted that the government should act to safeguard monies, policies and activities which they have been entrusted to supervise. But when it becomes apparent that the government is seeking additional involvement in areas not of its primary concern, solely for the sake of the aggrandizement of raw power, then it becomes clear that this trend must be arrested and reversed.

A necessary first step is a basic reform of the government itself. It

To say that the Student Senate was paranoid over charges of "power grabbing" was, by its inaccuracy, indicative of a big problem facing the students who were instrumental in developing student power: they suffered from pangs of hunger for the new plateful of authority and responsibility—with the accompanying, natural distrust in those co-developers who would share the bounty. For the interests of 12,630 co-existing undergraduates had to be coordinated. "How?", the question implicit among students in qualitatively different positions of influence, was throughout the year amplified by the Administration's declining intervention into our own internal affairs.

Student Organizations were of two basic types: those whose powers were determined by formal means, and those which achieved power by the fact of their actions; but these types weren't mutually exclusive. The means to those powers existed on a spectrum. Toward one end would be Area, Residence Hall, and Class Governments, Communications Media, Judiciaries, Honor Societies, and the Student Union Governing Board; on the other end of this spectrum were militant groups whose influence followed their actions; and uniquely in the middle was the Student Senate—with not only the means to exert forces then at its disposal, but to will into existence added Senate responsibility and requisite authority, which it attempted to do via the new constitution.

This new constitution, if accepted by the students in the Fall of '69, would provide the Senate with powers which would have thereby made unequivocal the tools to build a comprehensive Senate control over the other elected groups already accountable directly to their respective electorates. The new constitution would also provide the Student Senate with firmer control over all other recognized organizations, by means of newly certified, unquestionable powers to reject or suspend their constitutions, thus recognition, and to regulate their financial and constitutional procedures.

Rarely, members of a recognized group would commit an act of a criminal nature, e.g., the misappropriation of the Debating Team's funds, as found by the General Court in May of '68; and the Senate would be quick to catch the culprits. But the two most significant problems attributable to all organizations, in various degrees, were INEFFICIENCY and AMBITION, structurally, financially. These problems were especially chronic, with acute flareups, with organizations whose prime function was to produce a service or a product for all students, with the aid of student tax money. Students expected a great deal from their various representative bodies, newspaper, yearbook, magazines, etc., whose structural and financial affairs had to be commensurately complex. The aim of the Senate was to assure maximum efficiency and sound development in those affairs.

But, would the Senators be sophisticated and professional enough—or even knowledgeable enough!—to best serve the students' welfare by giving itself even more perogatives in manipulating and determinating the affairs and policies of subordinate, often highly specialized organizations? Not if you used the Senate's own degree of efficiency and lack of excess ambitions as a yardstick.

Yet, if the Student Senate has thus far been depicted by somewhat of a Devil's Advocate, it is also with the realization that the Senate acted strictly as a corporate entity and thus could be evaluated only as such; because Senators themselves were, at the worst, guilty only of their heightened desires to make four years of university life much more fulfilling for everyone, and, of their pride in having played a determining role. But additionally guilty were some of the core members of the Senate who did not receive trustingly enough, nor in a spirit constructive enough, the plentiful student leaders in other branches of student involvement, who were possessed with a like quality of purpose and integrity, and vice versa, who might therefore have otherwise steered the concept of Student Self-Determination and Unification from harm's way, and into Eden.

STUDENT UNION GOVERNING BOARD—

The Student Union Governing Board was charged with the rather encompassing task of regulating and providing for the proper functioning of the Student Union, and planning for the new Campus Center. The breadth of this responsibility included the establishment of social, cultural, and educational programs within the Student Union and all policy for the Union's operation.

SUG Board members were undergraduates elected from each class, a Senate representative, graduate students, faculty, and members of the Union's staff. However, any member of the Student Body was eligible to join the Student Union Program Council, a standing committee of the SUG Board, which administered the varied social programs sponsored by the Union.

One of the Board's biggest headaches, this year, was the allocation of space and specification of the facilities in the Campus Center. Delays along these lines resulted with the protraction of the Center's completion date by almost a year. The greatest concern seemed to be the question of which parts of the Center would be directly and expressly reserved for student use and control.

In proportion to its significance on campus life, the SUG Board and its operation were too little exposed to the people whom it served. Because of that somewhat enigmatic existence, the SUG Board had been especially vulnerable to Student Senate plans aimed at reducing the Board to the status of a Senate committee. This vulnerability was due almost solely to the gross amount of inefficiency regarding the Board's efforts to set up the Campus Center's operation. But the inefficiency was not due to any lack of concern by the SUG Board members; rather, that many members of the campus community, who would have been better qualified to cope with the situation, were de facto deprived of the information necessary to sufficiently motivate their involvement with the Board; the deprivation was related to the inadequate exposure. So on went the vicious circle.

The end product: a possible death of the concept which provided for the direct election of fellow students who would regulate—without Grace from Above—the policies and procedures in a very important focus of student activity.

UNIVERSITY DISCIPLINE BOARD

The University Discipline Board was the highest campus judiciary, appeal from which was subject only to the President and Board of Trustees. Composed of four students and four faculty, it functioned primarily in an appellate capacity with regard to Student Code and academic violations.

Perhaps its greatest value is the protection it extended to students who might otherwise have been "victimized" by capricious faculty and administrators, since their actions were subject to the scrutiny and revocation of a board with students having had full voting power.

GENERAL COURT

The General Court was the highest all student judicial board on campus. This year, rather than being concerned with curfew violations, the General Court instead heard cases of more immediate importance to the university community, many in relation to the new open house policy. An important case this year was the Dwight House Decision, in which a precedent was established with respect to dorm autonomy. In this decision and in general, the Court had realized its primary responsibility to the student body.

M. Treadup; M. Stein; J. Sonn, Chief Justice; C. Larocque, Clerk.

In its first year of operation, The Greek Judiciary existed to provide fraternity men and sorority women with protection of their rights as students, and to enforce, when called upon, University regulations. Jurisdiction existed over an area that ranged from Alpha Sigma Phi on Sunset Avenue, to Alpha Epsilon Pi on East Pleasant Street, excluding non Greek property.

GREEK JUDICIARY

Clerk, J. Watson; J. Edwards, Chief Justice; A. Byer.

AREA EAST JUDICIARY

The Area East Judiciary was composed of five residents selected from the Central Area, Orchard Hill, and the New Northeast. The Judiciary met as cases arose from infractions within the boundaries of North and South Dining Commons, and outside dorms east of N. Pleasant St. A chief justice elected by the board, Jim Sonn presided over all cases.

J. Walsh, L. Bianchi, C. Winter, D. Veale, P. Cadets; at piano, S. Cannavo.

AREA WEST JUDICIARY

The Area West Judiciary was organized through the Judicial Reforms of 1967, primarily as an appellate court for the Southwest Residential College. Concerns peculiar to the Area West Judiciary included its role as constitutional arbiter to the Southwest Assembly, and the special problems associated with the towers: an atmosphere more densely populated and more urban than that of the rest of campus.

SOUTHWEST PATRIOTS

With somewhat thicker stripes on their jackets, the Southwest Patriots came on stronger than ever to battle against apathy and city fatigue by initiating new activities and programs. One of these, the Glass Onion, made available a night club scene in which rock, folk, jazz, light shows, and good old fashioned social mixers provided respites from the pressures of routine living. And no small contribution was their work on the Freshman Week Program.

The Revelers, with their red, pinstriped jackets, were like fixtures at rallies and games. They personified the kind of school spirit whose glory had been more regal with years past. However, their function as "helpers" at events like Freshman Convocation and the Adelpia sponsored dance had added a new meaning to their existence on campus; if they ever re-name themselves, "The Good Guys" might be appropriate, because they always made themselves available when those with a shortage of manpower looked for help.

The Cheerleaders had a really rough year: at Football games, they (with the Revelers and Patriots) ended up making most of the noise; and at rallies, they accounted for a healthy percentage of the participants.

The tragedy, however, was not so much with the Cheerleaders, but with the students who couldn't displace the many thoughts concerning problems with the campus, country, and world, in favor of a few hours of superficial yet psychologically needed escape via the levitation provided by active school spirit. For, as time tells, the memory of these moments help sustain us when the pressures of living become too severe.

As the University bulged to 12,600 undergrads, some people started to say that identification with one's class was no longer possible; whether talking about it was after the fact or helped establish the fact, identifying with a class, per se, became something only our parents could tell us about. The question then arose among certain elite student saviors as to the worthiness of Class Government: is it like a vermiform appendix — worthless to "vital functions" and capable of becoming inflamed and mortally painful? By their attempts, legislatively and fiscally, to emasculate Class Government, albeit not successfully, they must have thought so.

But each Class Government, over 50 strong, no longer attempted to rule its constituents; rather, it served to establish or coordinate the social functions — of which UMass had no paucity. It was also responsible for selecting the recipient of the Metawampe Award, and hosting (with DVP) celebrities such as former Vice President Humphrey.

In short, they were responsible for organized enjoyment and some cultural activities; and without their influence, life on this campus would have been exceedingly grim, however "relevant."

ALPHA PHI OMEGA

Over the past few years the influence of the Kappa Omicron Chapter of Alpha Phi Omega had increased steadily. Although the value of their work in running the Used Book Exchange, in organizing the University Blood Drive and in ushering at the performances of the University Theater was commonly recognized, the various projects in which the members of this service fraternity participated had grown in number to such an extent that it is difficult to list them in a single paragraph.

One such project, begun a few years ago, met with so much success that it became established as one of the major social events of the college year: Las Vegas Night.

GAMMA SIGMA SIGMA

Similar to Alpha Phi Omega in its goals and functions, this service sorority has also grown in importance in recent years. In addition to working for the Hampshire County Public Health Department, the University Box Office, and the mentally retarded at the Belchertown State School, and to assisting the brothers of Alpha Phi Omega in many of their projects, the sisters of Gamma Sigma Sigma have continued to increase their services to the campus and to the outside community.

ARCON

To a visitor on campus, the name ARCON is of particular significance, for it is the function of this organization to serve as his guide. Composed of members from various fraternities, ARCON has introduced thousands of guests to the University over the past few years.

In all, the rise of its service fraternities and sororities speaks well for the University of Massachusetts, for membership in such an organization is an education within itself whereby an individual is taught that there is no greater satisfaction than that which comes from working with others for the benefit of all.

BELCHERTOWN VOLUNTEERS

Students gained practical experience in education, psychology, and nursing, while acquiring a deep satisfaction, by helping, the mentally retarded at Belchertown State School. The Volunteers encouraged the children to participate in sports, arts and crafts, and to become more aware of the complex world around them. In this way, the Volunteers hoped to prepare the children to meet the challenge of the "outside" when they leave the institution; but most of all, to make them a little happier.

ARNOLD AIR SOCIETY

Arnold Air Society, a cadet military honor organization, continued to sponsor the Flying Redmen, an all-university drill team, and the Angel Flight, and organization of college women interested in the AFROTC and the Air Force. Other activities this past year included: work with the Civil Air Patrol, affiliation with Boy Scout Troops in the area, a broadened High School Vistation Program; a volunteer program at Belchertown State School; and sponsorship of the NCO Academy.

ANGEL FLIGHT

Angel Flight, an honorary organization of College women, was sponsored by Arnold Air Society. They served the community, the AFROTC, and the Air Force.

This year they had a picnic for retarded children, sponsored the Top Ten College Girl Contest, and ushered at football games and various ceremonies.

During March, approximately twelve girls attended the National Conclave in New Orleans, at which their advisor Colonel Friedman, Professor of Air Science, was given the Outstanding Advisor's Award.

A desire to serve along with sisterhood drew many.

SCABBARD AND BLADE

The military is more than just discipline, it is initiative.

The Scabbard and Blade Honor Society was formed as L Company, 15th Regiment during the school year 1964-65. Since its inception, it has been active in the social affairs of the detachment. Social functions included three informal parties and a formal banquet held at Westover Air Force Base on May 1.

A military hostess DOES have her benefits.

Then in its sixth year, this auxiliary to the Scabbard and Blade, had been active in the Brigade social activities. The fourteen active members served as hostesses during the visits of distinguished guests and at various award ceremonies. In service to the community, the Colonel's Cadre and Scabbard and Blade had, for the past three years, conducted Christmas and Easter parties at the Cushman School for Retarded Children.

COLONEL'S CADRE

PRECISIONETTES

The Precisionettes, a collegiate girls' drill team, was organized in 1947 as a marching unit within the University Marching Band. While a part of the band they performed at various football games, rallies, and homecoming parades. This arrangement continued until 1963, when they became an independent performing unit under the sponsorship of the Army ROTC.

The Precisionettes participated in the 1968 Coed National Inter-Collegiate Drill Team championships in Washington, D.C., and captured second place in the competition. They repeated this performance this year on April 10.

FLYING REDMEN DRILL TEAM

Once an AFROTC drill team, the all-University Flying Redmen Drill Team was composed of both men and women students. It served the University on campus, proudly represented it at drill competitions, and dazzled crowds at parades throughout New England and the East Coast. The Flying Redmen, specializing in precision trick drill, began a victorious season this year by taking the first place trick trophy at the Canisius College Invitational Drill Meet. This trophy was followed by the third place trophy for overall excellence in drill at Manhattan, New York, where the Flying Redmen dauntlessly faced the best teams in the country.

PRE-MEDICAL SOCIETY

The University of Massachusetts Pre-Medical Society was an organization enabling the Pre-Medical, Pre-Dental, and Pre-Veterinary student to pursue his respective interests on a more encompassing level than that provided by classroom instruction. Members were exposed to current medical topics on a first-hand basis through films, lecturing physicians, noted specialists in the health fields, and staff members of the University Health Services. Deans representing various medical and dental schools came to the University and provided vital information pertaining to professional school admissions. Society members also had the opportunity to see medicine in the working through the Society's Undergraduate Medical Experience, a program in which members followed physicians on their daily rounds at Wesson Memorial Hospital in Springfield. The Pre-Medical Society had much to offer, and the only requirement for membership was a desire to become involved.

If anything, it wasn't a dull year, for the MDC. The largest circulation in history, the inception of 8 a.m. deliveries to campus, and expanded campus and world wide news coverage, plus numerous special editions, would have been enough; still, there was more.

Controversy arose with all night coverage of the Whitmore sit-in, the Afro-Am dispute, and the demonstration against Strom Thurmond. The paper sponsored a student referendum concerning on-campus recruiting. The MDC helped initiate the campaign for funds to purchase newspaper ads protesting legislative budget cuts. It also helped revoke the proposed $50 room desposit fee.

The expansion led to improve quality. The Associated Collegiate Press in giving a first class rating stated that the Daily Collegian, "falls just short of the top dailies in the country." That's quite an accomplishment for a paper in only its second year of daily publication.

W M U A

On the air more hours this year than ever, WMUA evolved an entirely new concept of service to the UMASS community.

Concentrating on providing programs involving the University of Massachusetts, the station ran a specialized format of contemporary music for the students. Free from the restrictions placed on most commercial radio stations, WMUA introduced and explored the various aspects of today's music. The student was provided with a unique type of programming: Programming that would be educational and informational without being boring.

"We felt that we could best meet our objectives as an educational broadcaster if we concentrated our efforts on providing programs that involved the University of Massachusetts, rather than relying on the general packaged material that most educational radio stations used."

CAMPUS HUMOR MAGAZINE

The one and only humor magazine of the campus reappeared this year in a plain black wrapper after three years of scandal, investigation, and banishment. Published twice this year it carried the names of NO and Magazine, under an interdict not to use the name Yahoo. But the fight for christening ended in the spring when the magazine was allowed once more to call itself Yahoo. Filled with humor, satire and cartoons the magazine sought sophisticated humor in the feeling that the old style humor magazines no longer had a place on the day's campus. Nevertheless, the sick jokes were still there.

"Blessings of Yushnik"

ENGINEERING JOURNAL

Published four times yearly, the Journal sought to present the role of technology (and the engineer) in the day's society. Circulated among Engineering, math, and physical science majors the magazine has such regular features as editorials, student profiles, the Journal jokes, and the Engineer's girl.

"Working for the Journal is like eating a cream cheese sandwich, its not that well known and there's not that much to it, but if you like that sort of thing, it can be very satisfying."

SPECTRUM

"Our pride is invested in those who believe in our continuing success even before it is fully realized."

Covering a wide range of literary and art possibilities, Spectrum was the general interest magazine of the campus. In its second year of publication, the magazine had grown in the search to stimulate critical thinking in all areas of artistic thought. With its contributions tripling, the magazine expanded its coverage to include critical essays on movie-making and vocal and instrumental music besides the regular store of articles, poems, art, and photography. Without a faculty advisor, the staff was responsible for the success of the magazine, a success based on the acceptance of a responsibility to the entire university community.

Officially, it began on April 15, 1968, the direct result of a motion on the part of the Student Senate to sponsor a social action agency on campus, and the indirect result of the life and death of Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. It was given funds—$41,000 to be exact (of which three-fourths went towards the CCEBS program)—and, very importantly, it was given the leadership of Gil Salk.

Gil did not remain alone. In addition to a Board of Directors staffed by such leaders as Ron Hardy and Roy Mansur, he quickly gathered the support of over five hundred students for what was to become the most active campaign on this campus ever begun by a non-political organization. N.E.S. Tutoring, dorm coffee hours, the Curriculum Reform Teach-In, the P.A.R. Conference, the Day of Awareness, the Campus Construction Project, the Night of Inquiry, the Biafra drive, the clothing and toy drives, and the program supporting the California Grape strikers were all events which marked the plentiful success of that first year.

But for an organization such as this, what had been done was never as important as what would be done. Like the man who inspired it, this group was aware of the incredible distance separating it from its final goals.

COUNCIL OF ACADEMIC HONOR SOCIETIES

Tau Beta Pi is a national society to honor distinguished scholarship and character as undergraduates in engineering. On this campus, Tau Beta Pi is also active in establishing projects to promote a better understanding among students, their courses, instructors, and professors, and the engineering community.

The Council of Academic Honor Societies is composed of representatives from all University academic honor societies. The Council was established in 1968 for the purpose of working on matters of common concern to these societies, coordinating and stimulating interest in honor society activities, and expressing the feelings of this responsible sector of the student body.

The Hello Friend Folk Society was conceived in 1968. It became a reality during summer sessions, and in September, a functioning and autonomous part of the campus. The Society was a valuable outlet for personal expression. Its members were dedicated artists; each to his or her own art, be it folk music, poetry, or just plain creativity. Coffeehouses and concerts have characterized their present activity.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB

The International Club was a social and intercultural exchange society, open for membership to both Foreign and American students and faculty. In addition to the weekly Wednesday afternoon Coffee Hours, where each session was highlighted by a lecture or a nationality group presentation, the club held a food fiesta, a picnic, and an international talent show.

HEYMAKERS

Heymakers, one of the only established collegiate square dance clubs in New England, was open to, and consisted of members of the entire university community. During the weekly meetings, the professional caller, Henry Cosmini, called the dances for the experienced members, and instructed beginners on the basic movements. During the year, Heymakers visited other square dance clubs, attended New England square and folk dance conventions, and sponsored various on-campus activities. Heymakers attracts people from all groups, and provides an invigorating, yet relaxing evening of plain old-fashioned fun for those who chose to "square-em up."

With the sound of the bell they begin to scatter, pouring out of Hasbrouck, Morrill, Goessmann, Bartlett, squinting with the daylight, bunching up where the pathways have been washed out by mud, ducking cars across North Pleasant Street, shuffling down along the grass by the pond, banging through the Psych. Building; dressed in miniskirts, bell bottoms, blue jeans, culottes, V-necks, turtlenecks—a maze of shapes and colors. Looking closer, the shapes separate. At the edge of the pond a couple stares down at the goldfish feeding in the shallows; a small distance from them a man struggles with the wind for possession of his papers; further still, under the shelter of a tree, a girl sits hunched up on the grass and reads her morning mail. These are the people who make up the mass; individuals gradually developing as they pass through each of the four stages of a college career.

Challenge . . . personal exchanges helping to overcome the shyness and timidity acquainted with new surroundings.

Ideas . . . individuals grow from freshmen starting grounds. Each matures along his own lines.

People . . . learning and expressing, taking all of life into his own workshop to help mold a new 'fresh' man into a well-attuned, sharply aware senior in living.

SOPHOMORE — the year of self-discovery . . . joyful reunion with a roommate in September . . . a little chuckle at the beanie walking by . . . sitting alone wondering if you can really afford to go to Mike's and forget that exam — and you wind up studying because you get shot down . . . It's standing, watching those people, too unsure of yourself to get involved yet: no, not just yet — but I wish . . . loving life, smiling, laughing, valuing the bad times for the strength they developed in you, and cherishing the good for the vibrant gleam you gained . . . open, alert, often in a quandry, but stumbling forward to your great adventure of the future.

JUNIOR: What is a junior? Perhaps a face in a large crowd, knowing he belongs but yet secure in his individuality. He walks alone as if suspended in a bubble, realizing he can enter or leave at will. A junior marches with a different drum yet keeping in step with the entire parade. He is involved not for his own good or pleasure but to make the masses more meaningful to each other. Like a catalyst, he initiates action and calmly retreats, confident that the machines will run smoothly.

He is a cynic but with every right. Having participated and helped for two years, he glories in anticipating his senior year, when he can leave with no regrets, because he is sure of his indelible mark.

THE SENIOR: perhaps not loving the university so much as attached to it, as to a part of life that cannot be ignored or denied, to an influence, to a vast series of names, places, events and times that have changed him; caught between a desire to be free of the life and a fear of losing it.

Despite claims to the contrary, the senior year is more than a period of sophistication and social prominence. It is a time of learning, of realizing that people are what they are and not what you would like them to be, that the great moral truths which we held as so unquestionable are indeed very questionable, that the only way to achieve in this life is to help others achieve. It is a time of remembering, of being haunted by memories of your own stupidity and of the pain which it has caused others, by the names and faces of those who have already passed from your life, by a sad disillusionment, the result of so many rigidly planted ideals. And it is a time of worry, of planning for an all too uncertain future, where plans for jobs, grad. school and marriage become intermixed with—perhaps even lost in—the events of our time. For the senior, having passed through four years of preparation, is faced with the problem of shaping the lifetime which follows.

EIGHT SENIORS CHOSEN FOR DISTINGUISHED SENIOR AWARD

For the past three years, selected members of the faculty and administration had chosen a small group of seniors whom they felt had demonstrated outstanding service to the University community.

In my preliminary PSATs given in Newton in the second grade I scored very highly. Assured of a place in college, I became a grade school dropout. Ten years later, at seventeen, I commenced my college education at Lake Forest College. After one full year and two disciplinary probations I was given the choice of dropping out or being kicked out. At the tender age of eighteen, I left college and entered the Army. I lay dormant for three years until I came to Camp Umie where everyone lies dormant for four years. With three years sleeping experience behind me, I was immediately singled out as a leader.

My first political move was an attempt to establish an apathy club. I felt assured that at UMASS I would have no trouble finding members. The club was a failure. I was late for the first meeting and no one else showed up. Having failed at apathy I tried the next best thing: the Student Senate. For those of you who have never heard of the Student Senate, it is a gregarious forensic society that lacks the good sense of a debating club to put a time limit on dialogue. The senators meet on Wednesday night and then forget what they have done until the next meeting at which time they reconsider their previous actions. "Everyone has a good time" at the meetings, which translated into Latin is the UMASS motto.

As I leave I realize how little I have accomplished. President of the Student Senate is very little when I consider that I have never participated in a good sit-in or disrupted even one speaker. On a campus this size with so many racists and fascist pigs on it, I could have done better.

Eight individuals were selected this year. Each was asked to comment on their activities at the University and on their future goals.

My four years at the University of Massachusetts have been rewarding and frustrating ones. I have been active in my class and in the Student Union Governing Board – and have learned a lot through these activities. But I think the main reason that a student turns to extra-curricular activities that are unrelated to his field of studies is due to a lack of satisfaction in that field, lack of stimulation and motivation. The University should be a place for finding yourself and growing as a person – but not many people are concentrating on that in their classrooms. The oft repeated objective is left to happen as a by-product of your educational experience. The goal is clearly stated, but the focus is not aimed at achieving that goal.

Everyone deals with finding themselves in their own way, my way happened to be one that was positively rewarded by the society we are all a part of. Perhaps I did make an outstanding contribution to the university community, perhaps I am a student leader. Or more likely I will be no more important to the future of this institution than any other single student who has done their own thing in their own way – whether their picture and story is in the INDEX or not.

My four years here have been important ones and they will serve as a catalyst to whatever I will be.

Susan M. Brady

In the future I hope to be a writer with at least as much literary merit as Harold Robins. As I look forward and see myself tooled by the Military-Industrial Complex, hounded by tax collectors, nauseated by the old school Massachusetts politicians, and intimidated by the thought of growing up, I can only think of Peter Pan and the words of an anonymous Roman scholar:

ILLIGETIMI NON CARBORUNDUM EST.

Paul J. Silverman

As President of the student body at Newton South High School and a member of the varsity wrestling team, I gained experience both as a team leader and member which has carried over into my life at the University.

I became active in class government in my Freshman year and ran for Vice President of the class of 1969 as a Sophomore. I placed a poor second in that election. However, undaunted, I continued to be active in class affairs. I have been a member of the Class Executive Council for four years and a member of the President's Council since its inception. I have been chairman of various committees ranging from Winter Carnival and Homecoming Concert Chairman to Senior Day 1969.

I was Vice President of Alpha Epsilon Pi Fraternity my Junior year and President my Senior year. As a Junior, I was awarded the 1968 T. G. Harrison Scholarship Foundation Award for my activities in the field of Agriculture and Food Economics. I look forward to a career in management of food products and plan to receive a Masters Degree in Business Administration. As I reflect on the events of the past four years and social upheaval of our country today, I am reminded of what Oliver Wendell Holmes said concerning the course of human events:

"I find the great thing in this world is not so much where we stand as in what direction we are moving. We must sail sometimes with the wind and sometimes against it. But we must sail and not drift nor lie at anchor."

Peter Lewenberg

I was born in Salem, Massachusetts and have lived in North Beverly and in Salem. While attending Salem High School, I was active in the student council, the debating society, and the band, where I played the saxophone. I owe all that I am to my mother and father.

I came to the University in the autumn of 1965 and as I sought to become accustomed to college, I did not participate in anything until I rowed in the freshman boat in the UM Crew, a demanding but enjoyable sport. In the three years since then, I have been on the Southwest College Council, the Student Senate and some of its committees, the Student Affairs Committee, the Southwest Provisional Area Government, three house councils, and a constitutional commission. Also I have served on the Area West Judiciary, in which, as Chairman for three semesters, I have worked closely and variously with both students and administrators, and on the Master Planning Committee, trying to help shape the physical development of the campus according to my understanding of the student's interests. During my senior year I have also been a counselor and have worked in the Planning Office. I believe that I have gained personally far more from my experience in these various activities than I have been able to contribute - these have been an important part of my collegiate education, for from them especially I have learned the value of reasonableness, of compromise and mutual exchange, of respect for the validity of opinions other than my own, and of active participation in the diverse concerns of my environment.

Although I have majored in history, my longstanding interest in cartography, graphic design, visual expression, and participation in current affairs, has led me to choose a career in urban design and planning.

Jonathan Edwards

Perhaps it may sound rather banal, but my major concern both in high school and at the University has been to make my community a better place to live for all who are there. I have tried to make my activities relevant to what is happening here and in the outside community as well. I hope that what I have contributed is of enough significance to balance all that I have gained through my experiences. I have seen many aspects of the University – some good, some not so good; I have worked in many varied situations with many different people – again some good, some not so good. Sometimes my involvement was beneficial, sometimes it was worthless.

But there are many more situations yet to encounter and many more people yet to meet.

It used to be that after a person had been graduated from college, his major concern was his golf score. Tragically, this sphere of importance has remained unchanged for many and, as a result, too many things have remained the same.

What I have accomplished at the University is not nearly as important as how I make use of it in the future. As I began the first of my two summers working in institutions for youthful offenders, I was told, "You can't change the world." My future will depend upon how much I continue not to believe this.
Laurence R. Marcus

I am a "Distinguished Senior" but that term has little meaning and no relevance outside of the Student Union and Whitmore Administration Building. What it means is that instead of coping with the absurd institutional processing of human beings which we laughingly call "education," many other frustrated students and I decided to harass the administration and faculty to implement the changes we thought essential for a viable educational community. Although we have directed many changes in the social aspects of the community – in curfew regulation, in student government, in visitation policy – in a sense we have won hollow victories, because a person's right to live where he wants and with whom he wants is not a privilege to be parceled out by a school administration, a board of trustees or a state legislature. Through my experiences in student government though, I come to realize that through logic, persuasion and reason, change is possible at the University. However, the real change, the significant change, in academics, must come if the Academy is to survive. I hope that the students remaining at the University will pursue the monumental task started by the Academic Affairs Committee in revamping the curriculum and the educational "process" itself.

Of my own education in high school and college, I can only bow to Stephen Crane, when he declares:

"When it occurs to a man that nature does not regard him as important and that she feels she would not maim the universe by disposing of him, he first wishes to throw bricks at the temples, and he hates deeply the fact there are no bricks and no temples."

Susan J. Tracy

Rising from an essentially undistinguished background, I occupied the days prior to my arrival at the University of Massachusetts with polishing and perfecting (and modestly masking, temporarily) those talents of razor-sharp mental ability, lightening wit, and handsome school-boy looks which were to emerge and serve me in such good stead at the University.

Upon arriving, I deployed my arsenal of attributes and commenced my attack upon all those aspects of darkness and evil which characterized the University in its early (c. Civil War) days. It required a few decades for the University to recognize that I was on campus — coincident with their recognition of me, I came to see that the most serious problems requiring my attention were some relating to the education we were receiving. My task was clear.

Sallying forth to do battle with one of the largest units of the University, I found myself in the fortunate position of being on hand at the appropriate point at just the moment that the Daily Bugle began the review of the oft-cited but little understood document of campus academic discussion. Winding up a comprehensive review of said document, my fame as a prominent critic of our educational practices was established. Students trickled to my cause; and suddenly, an academic concern was a fashionable one to hold.

Aided by an able corps of sturdy fellow-travelers, we were able to score the coup of the decade by writing our own version of where it should be. Undaunted by the overwhelming indifference to our efforts, we published The Definitive Statement of our educational program for the ensuing years.

Having become an unreconstructable addict of the academic issues, I immediately made plans to join the other side of the war effort, to assure myself the chance of seeing our magnum opus through the exceedingly fine mill of consideration and implementation. I will console myself in my rapidly-approaching declining years (following my baccalaureate discharge) with the thought that I shall be laboring in the fields of educational planning and administration forever.

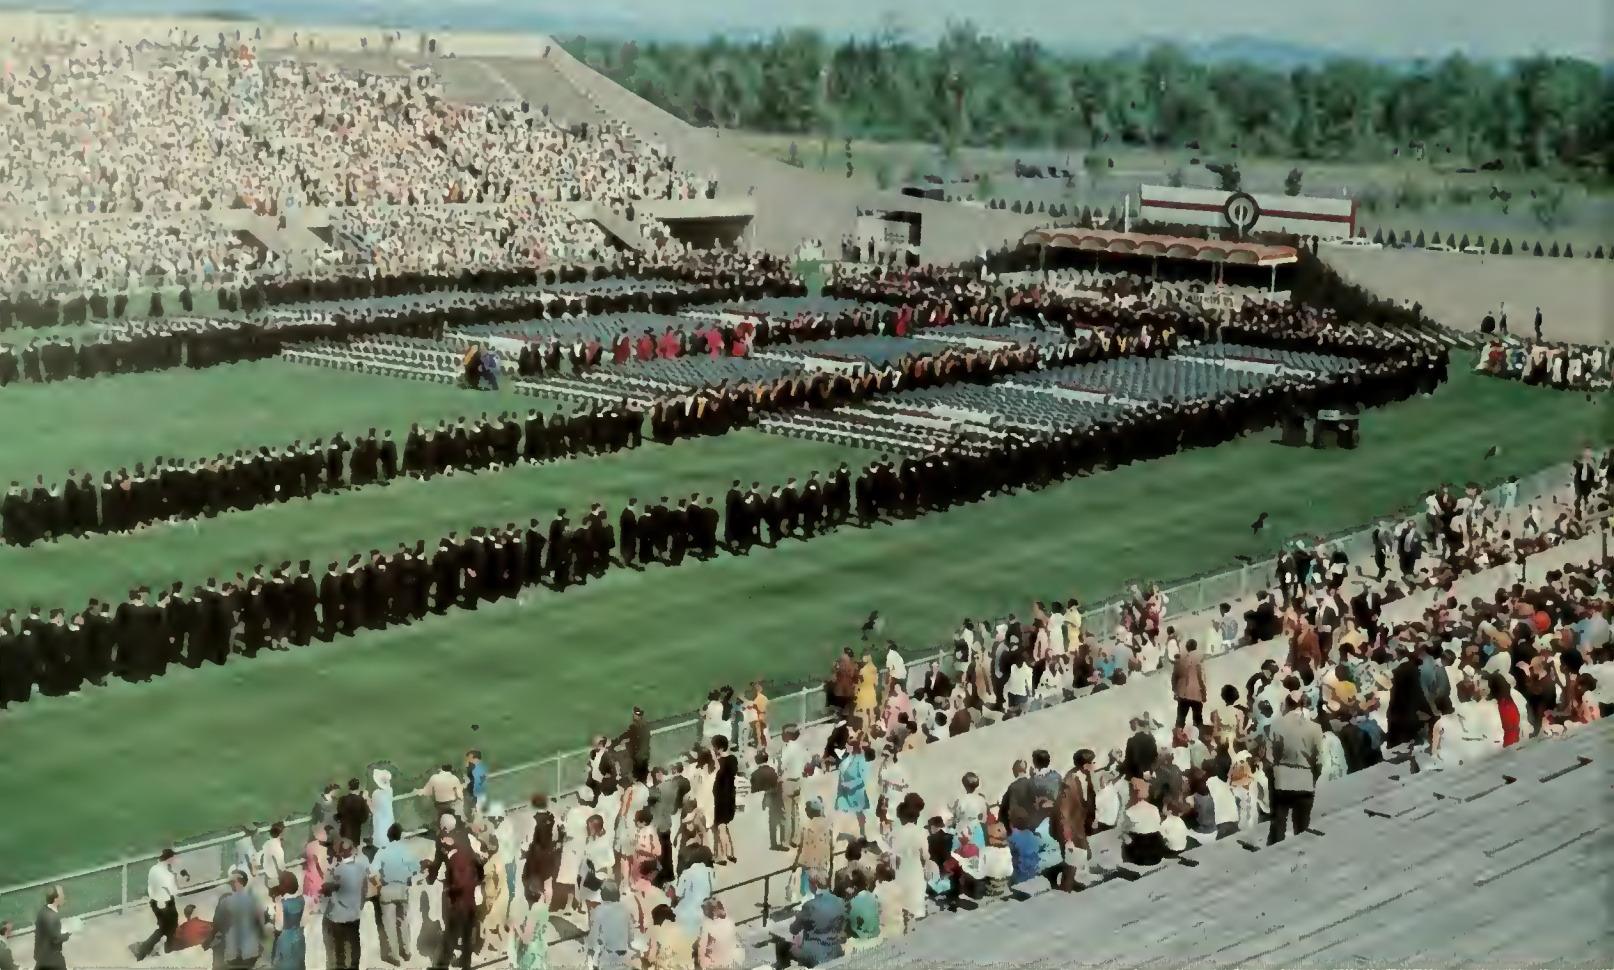

Richard W. Story

Life at the university proved to be decidedly different from the one-building concept of high school. After one day on campus I knew that an adventure and a challenge lay ahead of me. My years at UMass were indeed both adventuresome and challenging, though not in the ways I had envisioned. It didn't take long for my love of the English language and its literature to be transformed into distaste, thereby ending my plans to teach English. At the same time I discovered a whole new educational realm in the world of "extra-curricular activities" — an area which could prepare me far better for the real world, I felt, than could the academic curriculum to which I was being subjected. Gradually I became involved in a variety of activities, among them INDEX, COLLEGIAN, class exec council, and ROTC. By junior year, however, most of them had given way to the newspaper, which at that time advanced to daily publication. Inspired by my meager experience as a high school yearbook editor, I saw an opportunity to make the DAILY COLLEGIAN into an educational experience while helping the university at the same time. My outlook on college was partially expressed by a friend who left UMass in 1967 with less than a year to go till graduation. She said, "When school starts interfering with your education, it's time to quit." I modified this attitude and decided to stay, since the education I wanted was here though my curriculum was not really part of it.

Right now the publishing field looks rather intriguing, as does advertising. But whatever I do, it will undoubtedly be in spite of, rather than because of, my academic experience.

COMMENCEMENT 1969

On Saturday, May 31, 1969, the University of Massachusetts officially certified the thinking of 1900 members of its undergraduate student body. Of that number, there were 6 Summa Cum Laudes, 73 Magna Cum Laudes, and 238 Cum Laudes. The Summa graduates were: Barbara Ann Bogdan, Accounting; Samuel J. Cohen, General Business and Finance; Richard Barlow Day, Psychology; Jonathan Edwards, History; Robert J. Murphy, Accounting; and Pieper Joe Toyana, English.

Speaking at the commencement were: President John W. Lederle, Governor Francis W. Sargent, Senator Edward M. Kennedy and Senior Class President Wayne M. Thomas. Lederle bemoaned the loss of state funds and Governor Sargent passed this buck to the legislature, while Senator Kennedy concerned himself with a more universal problem, the war in Viet-Nam. Wayne Thomas, representing the Senior Class, gave a speech regarding student unrest.

Honorary degrees were awarded to Spanish poet, Damaso Alonso; UMass alumnus, Ellsworth Barnard; League of Women Voters president, Mrs. Bruce Benson; National T.V. News Celebrity, Walter Cronkite; Senator Edward Kennedy; MIT president, Howard W. Johnson; poet, Archibald MacLeish; sociologist, David Riesman; UMass trustee emeritus, Dr. Harry C. Solomon; and Chief Justice G. Joseph Tauro.

“ . . . As Graduates,
We Go Out Today,
Still Asking
The Same Questions,
But With the Added
Responsibility
Of Providing Some of
The New Answers.”

Wayne M. Thomas, President, Class of 1969

It seems strangely paradoxical that the major events of a lifetime rarely impress us at the moment of their occurrence. For most of us, graduation marked the end of one way of life and the beginning of something quite different, but few were aware of the change at the time. We were too busy. At the beginning we fought with the wind, secured zippers, and struggled to keep caps straight. The tassel gave us a problem — which side was it on? did we toss it? what did the colors mean? — only to find that it didn't matter, and then there was the line which was never quite right, and somehow those we were with ended up several feet in front of us. And the long wait in the sun while prayers were said and speeches made. And finally the Alma Mater we had rarely heard — and then another line, less organized than the first.

We were too busy. There was no time to think. And if we were to attach some special meaning to the events of that day, it would be at a later moment, and not then.

Official Senior Portraits by Root Photographers

A camera is a simple machine, it records only the light reflected from an object. A snapshot is easy to produce, some modern cameras are completely automated. A true photograph, however, is not as easy. The camera cannot hear or feel, it can only see, and even then it can only see a narrow angle, and it can't follow action.

Our photographers' job was to capture the dynamic functioning of the University: the atmosphere, the events, the living, and the people. In doing this, each photographer developed a style, like a painter or sculptor, only he must capture these feelings with what exists. A painter can ignore fences and buildings and mud. He can put green grass and happy faces in their place, but a photographer must include them in the picture, and a good photographer uses them to add to the picture.

The photographs on the next four pages are symbolic of the individual styles of some of the 1969 INDEX photographers. In looking back through the book, many of these styles are apparent.

When Marcia Sobiech went out to take candid pictures, no one dared to guess what she would come back with. Some of her most outstanding photos were taken in and around Orchard Hill. A new-comer to photography, she showed a sharp eye for the unusual.

Dick Vail's pictures are found throughout the book. Although as Assistant Photo Editor he consistently produced excellent photos for Campus Life and the Queens section, his most outstanding work was in the atmosphere section. This picture is representative of how he manipulated light for a special effect.

Roger Reid, next year's Photo Editor, has already demonstrated to us that he will fill the position well. This year he shot a wide variety of assignments from the first football game to graduation. Roger's outstanding ability is in capturing emotion as well as simple light on film.

John Wojciak, with this picture, and all that he took for the INDEX, showed us that the Leicaflex hanging around his neck wasn't just an ornament.

Scott Prior has the ability to turn a photograph into a collage. This picture was used as the divider page for the Class section because, like most of his pictures, it includes so much.

Bill Doubleday took many different assignments during the year and always came back with good results. In this picture he demonstrates his versatility in making the most of any photographic situation.

It is a difficult job, trying to capture the entire year in pictures. While doing this INDEX photographers have spent entire nights in Whitmore, flown 1500 feet over the campus, walked from Southwest to WoPE at 1 AM to take a five minute exposure, traveled 35 miles to shoot the parachute club, battled freezing cameras on ski slopes, taken pictures at 3 AM of the dawn, and spent many long nights taking pictures, followed by long mornings to finish studying. The photographers on the preceeding pages were responsible for many of the pictures, but the INDEX would be half empty without the help of Paul Chihocki, Dick Fleischer, Judy Hurwitz, Sue Kinner, Neil Rennie, Bill Simpson, George Williams, the editors who filled in when it was necessary, and the many others who helped during the year. As Photo Editor, I am grateful to all of these people for their help, and proud to have had so many talented people working with me.

Alan Marcus

OF THE 1969 MASSACHUSETTS INDEX . . .

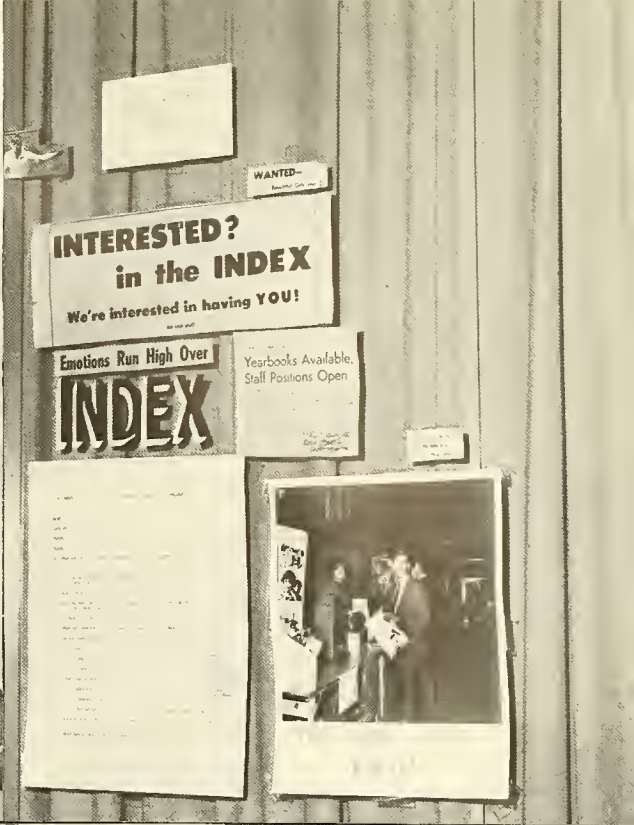

The INDEX is a venerable, yet very strange lady of the ages. To work in her shadow is pleasant, even though she may seem somewhat aloof; but if you get to see her, she reaches out, takes you, and holds you. She will clutch you to her bosom until the bounty of your mind's talent satiates her hungry soul. But, on her centennial pages, immortalized through the poignancy of man's past, as she is born of you, and about you, so shall she ever bear a part of you.

What made the 1968-1969 Academic Year different? A few new courses? New people? New Buildings? These certainly meant academic growth, new ideas, and more sheltered space within which to bring the two together for development. But that was happening before the first INDEX went to press a hundred years ago. The year, then, really wasn't different—in the qualitatively macroscopic sense: we seem to have been traveling down the same road through time, only its size and scenery keeps changing. This year was a section of that road, our road.

This book attempted to bear you over the road again and again. The assumption is that traveling this very little section of the road is, and will ever be a part of us, a part which we shall frequently yearn to review, and sometimes to relive. For even though the year wasn't that kind of different from a general point of view, it certainly was unique to each of us.

As the editor, my hope will be realized if merely a few parts of this INDEX—different parts for different people—will be especially helpful in the remembrance of your big walk on that little section of the road, 1968-1969.

It was the year when, for a precious moment on the Moon,
we were One.
